

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

CAUTION, BY THE AMERICAN PUBLISHERS.

Murray's Grammar

AS the correspondents of LINDLEY MURRAY, and publishers of his various works, COLLINS & Co. think it necessary to apprise the public, that several editions of the Grammar have been printed in different parts of the United States, with alterations of the original text, for which copy-rights have been claimed by the parties concerned, to secure to themselves an emolument arising from an exclusive sale. One edition of the Abridged Grammar, has been published by a teacher, at Boston, shortened, because it was conceived by him to have been before: too long. Another has been published by a teacher at Philadelphia, somewhat enlarged, because he considered it before too short. A third has been published at Worcester, by a teacher, who, thinking it to be neither too short nor too long, has introduced a "New System of Punctuation" only. A fourth has been published at Hartford, also enlarged, but with totally different motives from the edition of Philadelphia. It also differs from that printed as Worcester, even specifying in its title page, that it contains "Murray's Treatise on Punctuation at large." Although altered with such contradictory views, each claims a preference, each claims a copy-right, and each claims a profit. The publisher of one of the altered editions (that at Philadelphia) announces, that "the manifest superiority of his, over every other American edition of Murray's Abridgment, must ensure to it a decided preference wherever it can be obtained."!!

It will amuse many to be made acquainted with the ingenious expedients used by some of the authors of these mutilated editions to give them importance. The editor of the Philadelphia edition, though perhaps the least valuable of the whole, in recommendation of his performance, addresses the public thus:

"The very rapid sale of the former edition of this book, and its extensive circulation throughout the continent, now induce me to publish a second."

This "former edition," it is necessary to remark, consisted of one thousand copies, which, aided by a series of newspaper advertisements, were pushed off in eighteen months, that period having elapsed between the appearance of the first and the second edition. Of the REAL Murray's Abridgment, or that made by LINDLEY MURRAY himself, there have been sold, during the same period, in the cities of New-York and Philadelphia alone, not less than twenty thousand. The present advertisers have themselves published ten thousand, and it is not pretended that their editions have been circulated "THROUGHOUT THE CONTINENT." Not a copy has probably ever reached Cape Horn, Baffin's Bay, nor Nootka Sound, "throughout" all which places, it would seem that the production of the singular Grammarian of Philadelphia has had an "extensive circulation."!!

The same editor, with singular acuteness, urges his superiority over LINDLEY MURRAY, because, forsooth! he (the editor) is an "experienced teacher." Murray, he avers, "cannot be so well acquainted," &c. &c. It does not appear to have occurred to him that three equally, or perhaps more "experienced teachers," as we have had occasion to see, totally differ from him, have altered the work for reasons directly opposite, have all had perhaps quite as much of the support and "recommendations" of particular friends, and have all, no doubt, thought themselves entitled to receive as large a pecuniary compensation for their "improvements." !!!

Ille sinistrorsum, hic dextrorsum, unus utriusque
 ERROR, sed variis illudit partibus omnes. HOR.

In justice, however, to some of the friends of the editor of the Philadelphia edition, who gave him written recommendations of it for the newspapers, it should be mentioned that they have since honourably laid that book aside, and adopted the genuine grammar of Murray.

In consequence of the merits of the Grammar, as it came, in purity, from the pen of the author, about fifty thousand copies of the Abridgment, and thirty-five thousand of the Large Grammar, are sold annually. The former, in the short period of eleven years, has passed through twenty-one editions in England, and perhaps twice that number in America. The latter, twenty editions in England, and about thirty in America. Murray's Grammar is adopted in nearly all the Colleges and other Seminaries of education, in both countries, as the STANDARD. Every English Critic and Reviewer, who has mentioned it, has represented it as the best extant. The celebrated Dr. BLAIR, and WALKER, the Lexicographer, (a very "experienced teacher") are among those who have the most warmly recommended it.—Is it a light matter for American teachers to alter such a work?

Indeed the fact should not, in this place, be withheld from the public that the whole of the above mutilated editions have been seen and examined by LINDLEY MURRAY himself, and that they have met with his decided disapprobation. Every rational mind will agree with him, that "the rights of living authors, and the interests of Science and Literature, demand the abolition of this ungenerous practice;" for surely it is not a small evil that an elementary work which has met with universal approbation, passed through twenty-eight editions, been adopted as the standard in our Colleges, which has cost the author years of reflection to bring into system and order, and to make correct and harmonious in all its parts, should be deranged, mutilated and distorted by the crude and hasty variations and additions of an interested editor.

As some of the editors above alluded to, have endeavoured to justify themselves by asserting that even LINDLEY MURRAY approved of their different alterations, and have heaped on the advertisers much abuse for exposing their contradictions, &c. there shall be adduced at this time an extract of a letter from Lindley Murray, which will perhaps induce them to be more cautious in charging C. & Co. with "vindictive calumny" in future.

"I am much indebted to Collins & Co. for the neat and correct manner in which they reprint my publications; and for their care and exertions to exhibit the books AS THEY WERE PUBLISHED BY THE AUTHOR, and especially with HIS latest improvements. I shall make it a point to communicate to them from time to time, and as early as possible, copies of all the new and improved editions of the books. It affords me a peculiar gratification to perceive that my publications are so extensively diffused over my native country."

COLLINS & Co. think it due to the author of this very valuable Grammar, as well as to the cause of literature in general, to make known that, although they are at all times enabled to supply the latest American editions of the real Murray's Grammar, yet they are indisposed to monopolize the profits arising from the sale of a book, whose author would himself never receive any; and that they will therefore, with readiness, as they have done heretofore, furnish the latest London editions, which they regularly receive from the author, to any respectable printers, residing in other parts of the United States, who will only engage to print them handsomely and correctly.

The following is a list of COLLINS & Co.'s editions of Murray's works, with their prices at retail, and by the dozen.

ADVERTISEMENT TO THE TENTH EDITION.

THE author of this work, and of the books connected with it, thinks it is incumbent upon him to make some apology, for the variations which are to be found in the different editions. The infirm state of his health; his numerous occupations; and the quick succession of new editions of his English Grammar, English Exercises, and Key to the Exercises, prevented him from giving these books, at an early period of their publication, all the improvements which he had contemplated, or which had been occasionally suggested to him. The successive additions and improvements which these works have received, and which sometimes occasioned a want of correspondence amongst them, must certainly have been productive of inconvenience or expense, to many persons who had purchased the earlier editions. This, though the author regretted the circumstance, was, for the reasons alleged, unavoidable. He must either have suppressed the improvements entirely, or have inserted them gradually as the new editions appeared: but as he conceived them to be of considerable importance, he could not think it warrantable to omit them; and the approbation of the public has confirmed him in the propriety of this decision.

It is with particular satisfaction that the author can now state, that the additions and alterations which he had in view, are completed, and are contained in the Stereotype edition of the Grammar, the twelfth of the Exercises, and the tenth of the Key; that these editions of the books correspond exactly to one another; and that it is his intention that, in every future edition of each of them, this correspondence shall be faithfully preserved.

It is indeed possible, that some illustrations or justification of particular rules and positions contained in the Grammar, may yet be necessary. But if, contrary to expectation, this should be the case, the practical parts of the system will not be affected by such additions. The connexion, as it now subsists, between the Grammar, the Exercises, and the Key, will remain invariably the same; unless some error, at present unobserved, should hereafter be discovered.

As the types composing the Grammar have, for a considerable time, been kept standing; and as the book could not be enlarged without advancing its price; many of the subsequent improvements have been necessarily inserted in appropriate parts of the Exercises, or the Key. References have, however, been made in the Grammar, under the correspondent rules, to the additional notes and illustrations. To this mode of supplying improvements, the reader will have the less objection, when he considers that the Exercises and the Key are necessary appendages to the Grammar; and serve to illustrate and enforce, as well as to extend, its rules and positions. The three volumes are indeed intimately connected, and constitute one uniform system of English Grammar.

To this edition of the Key, the author has subjoined a copious Alphabetical Index to the Grammar, the Exercises and the Key; a work which, he flatters himself, will be generally useful; and particularly acceptable to students who have made some progress in the knowledge of grammar.

ORTHOGRAPHY.

CHAP. I.

Containing corrections of the false ORTHOGRAPHY arranged under the respective Rules.

RULE I.

Grammar, p. 37. Exercises p. 30.

IT is no great merit to spell properly ; but a great defect to do it incorrectly.

Jacob worshiped his Creator, leaning on the top of his staff.

We may place too little, as well as too much, stress upon dreams.

Our manners should be neither gross, nor excessively refined.

* A regular explanation of the Exercises in Parsing, would occupy a great portion of this volume ; and, after all, would be of little use to the learner : a Key to Part I. is therefore omitted. General directions, respecting the mode of Parsing, may be seen in the twelfth, or any subsequent edition of the Grammar, page 215. If they are carefully studied, they will enable the learner to parse all the exercises.

RULE II.

Grammar, p. 38. Exercises, p. 31.

A car signifies a chariot of war, or a small carriage of burden.

In the names of drugs and plants, the mistake in a word may endanger life.

Nor undelightful is the ceaseless bum
To him who muses through the woods at noon.

The fin of a fish is the limb, by which he balances his body, and moves in the water.

Many a trap is laid to insnare the feet of youth.

Many thousand families are supported by the simple business of making mats.

RULE III.

We should subject our fancies to the government of reason.

If thou art seeking for the living amongst the dead, thou weariest thyself in vain.

If we have denied ourselves sinful pleasures, we shall be great gainers in the end.

We shall not be the happier for possessing talents and affluence, unless we make a right use of them.

The truly good mind is not dismayed by poverty, afflictions, or death.

RULE IV.

Grammar, p. 38. Exercises, p. 32.

It is a great blessing to have a sound mind, uninfluenced by fanciful humours.

Common calamities, and common blessings, fall heavily upon the envious.

The comeliness of youth are modesty and frankness; of age, condescension and dignity.

When we act against conscience, we become the destroyers of our own peace.

We may be playful, and yet innocent; grave, and yet corrupt. It is only from general conduct, that our true character can be portrayed.

RULE V.

When we bring the lawmaker into contempt, we have in effect annulled his laws.

By deferring our repentance, we accumulate our sorrows.

The pupils of a certain ancient philosopher, were not, during their first years of study, permitted to ask any questions.

We all have many failings and lapses to lament and recover.

There is no affliction with which we are visited, that may not be improved to our advantage.

The Christian Lawgiver has prohibited many things, which the heathen philosophers allowed.

RULE VI.

Grammar, p. 39. Exercises, p. 33.

Restlessness of mind disqualifies us, both for the enjoyment of peace, and the performance of our duty.

The arrows of calumny fall harmlessly at the feet of virtue.

The road to the blissful regions, is as open to the peasant as to the king.

A chilness, or shivering of the body, generally precedes a fever.

To recommend virtue to others, our lights must shine brightly, not dully.

The silent stranger stood amaz'd to see
Contempt of wealth, and wilful poverty.

RULE VII.

The warmth of disputation, destroys that sedateness of mind which is necessary to discover truth.

All these with ceaseless praise his works behold,
Both day and night.

In all our reasonings, our minds should be sincerely employed in the pursuit of truth.

Rude behaviour, and indecent language, are peculiarly disgraceful to youth of education.

The true worship of God is an important and awful service.

Wisdom alone is truly fair: folly only appears so.

RULE VIII.

Grammar, p. 39. Exercises, p. 34.

The study of the English language is making daily advancement.

A judicious arrangement of studies facilitates improvement.

To shun allurements is not hard,
To minds resolv'd, forewarn'd, and well prepar'd.

RULE IX.

Every person and thing connected with self, is apt to appear good and desirable in our eyes.

Errors and misconduct are more excusable in ignorant, than in well-instructed persons.

The divine laws are not reversible by those of men.

Gratitude is a forcible and active principle in good and generous minds.

Our natural and involuntary defects of body, are not chargeable upon us.

We are made to be serviceable to others, as well as to ourselves.

RULE X.

An obliging and humble disposition, is totally unconnected with a servile and cringing humour.

By solacing the sorrows of others, the heart is improved, at the same time that our duty is performed.

Labour and expense are lost upon a dronish spirit.

The inadvertences of youth may be excused, but knavish tricks should meet with severe reproof.

RULE XI.

Grammar, p. 39. Exercises, p. 35.

Love worketh no ill to our neighbour, and is the fulfilling of the law.

That which is sometimes expedient, is not always so.

We may be hurtful to others, by our example, as well as by personal injuries.

Where diligence opens the door of the understanding, and impartiality keeps it, truth finds an entrance and a welcome too.

CHAP. II.

Containing corrections of the false ORTHOGRAPHY, promiscuously disposed.

SECTION I.

Exercises, p. 36.

NEGLECT NO opportunity of doing good.
No man can steadily build upon accidents.

How shall we keep, what sleeping or awake,
A weaker may surprise, a stronger take.

Neither time nor misfortunes should erase the re- membrance of a friend.

Moderation should preside, both in the kitchen and the parlour.

Shall we receive good at the Divine hand, and shall we not receive evil?

In many designs, we may succeed and be miserable.

We should have sense and virtue enough to recede from our demands, when they appear to be unreasonable.

All our comforts proceed from the Father of Goodness.

The ruin of a state is generally preceded by a universal degeneracy of manners, and a contempt of religion.

His father omitted nothing in his education, that might render him virtuous and useful.

The daw in the fable was dressed in pilfered ornaments.

A favour conferred with delicacy, doubles the obligation.

They tempted their Creator, and limited the Holy One of Israel.

The precepts of a good education have often recurred in the time of need.

We are frequently benefited by what we have dreaded.

It is no great virtue to live lovingly with good natured and meek persons.

The Christian religion gives a more lovely character of God, than any religion ever did.

Without sinistrous views, they are dexterous managers of their own interest.

Any thing committed to the trust and care of another, is a deposit.

Here finish'd he, and all that he had made View'd and beheld! All was entirely good.

It deserves our best skill to inquire into those rules, by which we may guide our judgment.

Food, clothing, and habitations, are the rewards of industry.

If we lay no restraint upon our lusts, no control upon our appetites and passions, they will hurry us into guilt and misery.

An Independent is one who, in religious affairs, holds that every congregation is a complete Church.

Receive his counsel, and securely move :
Intrust thy fortune to the Power above.

Following life in creatures we dissect,
We lose it in the moment we detect.

The acknowledgment of our transgressions must precede the forgiveness of them.

Judicious abridgments often aid the studies of youth.

Examine how thy humour is inclin'd,
And which the ruling passion of thy mind.

———He falters at the question :
His fears, his words, his looks, declare him guilty.

Calico is a thin cloth made of cotton ; sometimes stained with lively colours.

To promote iniquity in others, is nearly the same as being the actors of it ourselves.

The glazier's business was unknown to the ancients.

The antecedent, in grammar, is the noun or pronoun to which the relative refers.

SECTION 2.

Exercises, p. 38.

BE not afraid of the wicked : they are under the control of Providence. Consciousness of guilt may justly affright us.

Convey to others no intelligence which you would be ashamed to avow.

Many are weighed in the balance, and found wanting.

How many disappointments have, in their consequences, saved a man from ruin !

A well-poized mind makes a cheerful countenance.

A certain householder planted a vineyard, but the men employed in it made ungrateful returns.

Let us show diligence in every laudable undertaking.

Cinnamon is the fragrant bark of a low tree in the island of Ceylon.

A ram will butt with his head, though he be brought up tame, and never saw the action.

We perceive a piece of silver in a basin, when water is poured on it, though we could not discover it before.

Virtue embalms the memory of the good.

The king of Great Britain is a limited monarch; and the British nation a free people.

The physician may dispense the medicine, but Providence alone can bless it.

In many pursuits, we embark with pleasure, and land sorrowfully.

Rocks, mountains, and caverns, are of indispensable use, both to the earth and to man.

The hive of a city, or kingdom, is in the best condition, when there is the least noise or buzz in it.

The roughnesses found on our entrance into the paths of virtue and learning, grow smoother as we advance.

That which was once the most beautiful spot of Italy, covered with palaces, embellished by princes, and celebrated by poets, has now nothing to show but ruins.

Battering rams were anciently used to beat down the walls of a city.

Jockey signifies a man who rides horses in a race; or who deals in horses.

The harmlessness of many animals, and the enjoyment which they have of life, should plead for them against cruel usage.

We may be very busy, to no useful purpose.

We cannot plead in abatement of our guilt, that we are ignorant of our duty.

Genuine charity, how liberal soever it may be, will never empoverish ourselves. If we son sparingly, we shall reap accordingly.

However disagreeable, we must resolutely perform our duty.

A fit of sickness is often a kind chastisement and discipline, to moderate our affections for the things of this life.

It is a happiness to young persons, when they are preserved from the snares of the world, as in a garden enclosed.

Health and peace, the most valuable possessions, are obtained at small expense.

Incense signifies perfumes exhaled by fire, and made use of in religious ceremonies.

True happiness is an enemy to pomp and noise.

Few reflections are more distressing, than those which we make on our own ingratitude.

There is an inseparable connexion between piety and virtue.

Many actions have a fair complexion, which have not sprung from virtue.

Which way soever we turn ourselves, we are encountered with sensible demonstrations of a Deity.

If we forsake the ways of virtue, we cannot allege any colour of ignorance, or want of instruction.

SECTION 3.

THERE are more cultivators of the earth, than of their own hearts.

Man is encompassed with dangers innumerable.

War is attended with distressful and desolating effects. It is confessedly the scourge of our angry passions.

The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof.

The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few.

The greater our incitements to evil, the greater will be our victory and reward.

We should not encourage persons to do what they believe to be wrong.

Virtue is placed between two extremes, which are both equally blamable.

We should continually have the goal in our view, which would direct us in the race.

The goals were forced open, and the prisoners set free.

It cannot be said that we are charitable donors, when our gifts proceed from selfish motives.

Strait is the gate, and narrow the way, that lead to life eternal.

Integrity leads us straight forward, disdaining all doublings and crooked paths.

Licentiousness and crimes pave the way to ruin.

Words are the counters of wise men, but the money of fools.

Recompense to no man evil for evil.

He was an excellent person; a mirror of ancient faith in early youth.

Meekness controls our angry passions: candour, our severe judgments.

He is not only a descendant from pious ancestors, but an inheritor too of their virtues.

A dispensary is the place where medicines are dispensed: a dispensatory is a book in which the composition of them is described.

Faithfulness and judgment are peculiarly requisite in testamentary executors.

To be faithful among the faithless, argues great strength of principle.

Mountains appear to be like so many wens or unnatural protuberances on the face of the earth.

In some places the sea encroaches upon the land; in others, the land upon the sea.

Philosophers agreed in despising riches, as the encumbrances of life.

Wars are regulated robberies and piracies.

Fishes increase more than beasts or birds, as appears from their numerous spann.

The pyramids of Egypt have stood more than three thousand years.

Precepts have small influence, when not enforced by example.

How has kind Heav'n adorn'd the happy land,
And scatter'd blessings with a wasteful hand.

A friend exaggerates a man's virtues, an enemy inflames his crimes.

A witty and humorous vein has often produced enemies.

Neither pleasure nor business should engross our time and affections; proper seasons should be allotted for retirement.

It is laudable to inquire before we determine.

Many have been visited with afflictions, who have not profited by them.

We may be successful, and yet disappointed.

SECTION 4.

Exercises, p. 42.

The experience of want enhances the value of plenty.

To maintain opinions stiffly, is no evidence of their truth, or of our moderation.

Hoarhound has been famous for its medicinal qualities: but it is now little used.

The wicked are often insnared in the trap which they lay for others.

It is hard to say what diseases are curable: they are all under the guidance of Heaven.

Instructors should not only be skilful in those sciences which they teach; but have skill in the method of teaching, and patience in the practice.

Science strengthens and enlarges the minds of men.

A steady mind may receive counsel; but there is no hold on a changeable humour.

We may inure ourselves by custom, to bear the extremities of weather without injury.

Excessive merriment is the parent of grief.

Air is sensible to the touch by its motion, and by its resistance to bodies moved in it.

A polite address is sometimes the cloak of malice.

To practise virtue is the sure way to love it.

Many things are plausible in theory, which fail in practice.

Learning and knowledge must be attained by slow degrees: and are the reward only of diligence and patience.

We should study to live peaceably with all men.

A soul that can securely death defy,
And count it nature's privilege to die.

Hast thou no better reason for censuring thy friend and companion?

Thou, who art the Author and Bestower of life, canst doubtless restore it also: but whether thou wilt please to restore it, or not, that thou only knowest.

“ O thou my voice inspire,
Who touch'd Isaiah's hallowed lips with fire.
“ Who touchest or didst touch.”

Accept these grateful tears: for thee they flow;
For thee that ever felt another's wo.
“ Didst feel.”

Just to thy word, in ev'ry thought sincere;
Who knew no wish but what the world might hear.
“ Who knewest or didst know.”

The following examples are adapted to the notes and observations under RULE I.

Grammar. p. 139. Exercises, p. 50.

1. To do unto all men, as we would that they, in similar circumstances, should do unto us, constitutes the great principle of virtue.

From a fear of the world's censure, to be ashamed of the practice of precepts which the heart approves and embraces, marks a feeble and imperfect character.

The erroneous opinions which we form concerning happiness and misery, give rise to all the mistaken and dangerous passions that embroil our life.

To live soberly, righteously, and piously, is required of all men.

That it is our duty to promote the purity of our minds and bodies, to be just and kind to our fellow-creatures, and to be pious and faithful to Him that made us, admits not of any doubt in a rational and well-informed mind.

To be of a pure and humble mind, to exercise benevolence towards others, to cultivate piety towards

God, are the sure means of becoming peaceful and happy.

It is an important truth, that religion, vital religion, the religion of the heart, is the most powerful auxiliary of reason, in waging war with the passions, and promoting that sweet composure which constitutes the peace of God.

The possession of our senses entire, of our limbs uninjured, of a sound understanding, of friends and companions, is often overlooked; though it would be the ultimate wish of many, who, as far as we can judge, deserve it as much as ourselves.

All that makes a figure on the great theatre of the world, the employments of the busy, the enterprises of the ambitious, and the exploits of the warlike; the virtues which form the happiness, and the crimes which occasion the misery of mankind; originate in that silent and secret recess of thought, which is hidden from every human eye.

2. If the privileges to which he has an undoubted right, and which he has long enjoyed, should now be wrested from him, it would be flagrant injustice.

advantageous:" not, "was always advantageous."—But if the assertion referred to something that is not always the same, or supposed to be so, the past tense must be applied: as, "George said, that he was very happy:" not, "is very happy." The following sentences will fully exemplify, to the young grammarian, both the parts of this rule. "He declared to us, that he was afraid of no man; because conscious innocence gives firmness of mind."—"He protested, that he believed what was said, because it appeared to him probable."—"Charles asserted, that it was his opinion, that men always succeed, when they use precaution and pains."—"The doctor declared to his audience, that if virtue suffers some pains, she is amply recompensed by the pleasures which attend her."

If the preceding rule should not be completely applicable to every case which ingenuity may state, the author presumes that it will be found very generally useful.

Though we have, in the notes under the thirteenth rule of the Grammar, explained in general the principles, on which the time of a verb in the infinitive mood may be ascertained, and its form determined; yet as the subject is curious and important, and the practice of good writers upon it, is very discordant, we presume it will not be unacceptable to the young student of grammar, if we produce a few additional observations calculated to settle his judgment on this contested point.

The following rule, founded on the authorities of Harris, Lowth, and Campbell, and we think too, on the authority of common sense, appears to be accurate, as well as simple and intelligible. "When the action or event signified by a verb in the infinitive mood, is contemporary or future, with respect to the verb to which it is chiefly related, the present of the infinitive is required: when it is not contemporary nor future, the perfect of the infinitive is necessary." To comprehend and apply this rule, the student has only to consider, whether the infinitive verb refers to a time antecedent, contemporary, or future, with regard to the governing or related verb. When this simple point is ascertained, there will be no doubt in his mind, respecting the form which the infinitive verb should have. Two or three examples may illustrate these positions. If I wish to signify, that I rejoiced at a particular time, in recollecting the sight of a friend, some time having intervened between the seeing and the rejoicing, I should express myself thus: "I rejoiced to have seen my friend." The seeing, in this case, was evidently antecedent to the rejoicing; and therefore the verb which expresses the former, must be in the perfect of the infinitive. The same meaning may be expressed in a different form: "I rejoiced that I had seen my friend;" or "is

From having exposed himself too freely in different climates, he entirely lost his health.

The examples which follow, are suited to the notes and observations under RULE XIV.

1. By observing truth, you will command esteem as well as secure peace.

having seen my friend :” and the student may, at any time, try the propriety of a doubtful point of this nature, by converting the phrase into its correspondent forms of expression.

If, on the contrary, I wish to signify, that I rejoiced at the sight of my friend, that my joy and his presence were contemporary, I should, say, “I rejoiced to see my friend;” or, in other words, “I rejoiced in seeing my friend.” The correctness of this form of the infinitive may also be tried, by converting the phrase into its correspondent modes of expression.

As the verbs to desire and to wish, are nearly related, the young student may naturally suppose, from the rule at page 181 of the Grammar, that the latter verb, like the former, must, invariably be followed by the present of the infinitive. But if he reflect, that the act of desiring always refers to the future; and that the act of wishing refers sometimes to the past, as well as sometimes to the future; he will perceive that the following modes of expression are strictly justifiable: “I wished that I had written sooner,” “I wished to have written sooner :” and he will be perfectly satisfied that the following phrases must be improper: “I desire that I had written sooner,” “I desire to have written sooner.”—See this point more particularly explained in the author’s Grammar, p. 183 of the sixteenth edition.

Some writers on grammar contend, that the sentence, “I intend to have written,” is correct and grammatical, because it simply denotes, as they assert, the speaker’s intention to be hereafter in possession of the finished action of writing. But to this reasoning the following answers may be given: that the phrase “to have written” is stated in English grammars, as the established past tense of the infinitive mood; that it is as incontrovertibly the past tense of the infinitive in English, as scripsisse is the past tense of the infinitive, in Latin; that no writers can be warranted in taking such liberties with the language, as to contradict its plainest rules for the sake of supporting an hypothesis; that these writers might, on their own principles and with equal propriety, contend, that the phrase, “I intend having written,” is proper and grammatical; and that by admitting such violations of established grammatical distinctions, confusion would be introduced, the language would be disorganized and the most eccentric systems of grammar might be advanced and plausibly supported.—In short, the phrase, “I intend to have written,” appears to involve the following absurdity; “I intend to produce hereafter an action or event, which has been already completed.”

He prepared them for this event, by sending to them proper information.

RULE XX.

Grammar, p. 206. Exercises, p. 90.

In some respects, we have had as many advantages as they ; but in the article of a good library, they have had a greater privilege than we have had.

The undertaking was much better executed by his brother than by him.

They are much greater gainers than I am by this unexpected event.

They know how to write as well as he does ; but he is a much better grammarian than they are.

Though she is not so learned as he is, she is as much beloved and respected.

These people, though they possess more shining qualities, are not so proud as he is, nor so vain as she.

The following examples are adapted to the notes and observations under RULE XX.

Grammar, p. 206. Exercises, p. 91.

1. Who betrayed her companion ? Not I.

Who revealed the secrets he ought to have concealed ? Not he.

Who related falsehoods to screen herself, and to bring an odium upon others ? Not I ; it was she.

There is but one in fault, and that is I. Or—myself.

* Some respectable grammarians suppose, that the word as is always a pronoun ; and that, in every situation, it has the meaning of it, that, or which. They would, however, find it difficult to prove, that, in the following sentences, this word has the meaning of any one of those pronouns. “ As to those persons, I must say, as it is due to them, that they were as disinterested as their opponents.” “ Love thy neighbour as thyself.” “ Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors.” “ And as Paul was long preaching, Eutychus sunk down.” See the Grammar, Stereotype edition, pages 142, 143.

Whether he will be learned or not, must depend on his application.

Charles XII. of Sweden, than whom a more courageous person never lived, appears to have been destitute of the tender sensibilities of nature.

Salmasius (and a more learned man than he has seldom appeared) was not happy at the close of life.*

RULE XXI.

Grammar, p. 207. Exercises, p. 92.

I gladly shunned him who gladly fled from me.

And this is that which men mean by distributive justice, and which is properly termed equity.

His honour, his interest, his religion, were all embarked in this undertaking.

When so good a man as Socrates fell a victim to the madness of the people, truth, and virtue, and religion, fell with him.

* Some grammarians suppose that the words than and but are sometimes used as prepositions, and govern the objective case. They adopt this idea, from the difficulty, if not impossibility, as they conceive, of explaining many phrases, on any other principle. This plea of necessity appears, however, to be groundless. The principle of supplying the Ellipsis is, we think, sufficient to resolve every case, in which than or but occurs, without wresting these words from their true nature, and giving them the character of prepositions. In the Grammar, under Rule 20th, page 206, we have exhibited a number of examples, showing that the supply of the ellipsis sufficiently explains their construction. But as these may be deemed obvious cases, we shall select some, which appear to be more difficult in their development. The following are of this nature. "I saw nobody, but him;" "No person but he was present;" "More persons than they, saw the action;" "The secret was communicated to more men than him;" "This trade enriched some people more than them." All these sentences may be explained, on the principle of supplying the ellipsis, in the following manner. In the first, we might say "I saw nobody, but I saw him;" or, "I saw nobody but him I saw;" in the second, "None was present, but he was present;" in the third, "More persons than they were, saw the action." or, "More than these persons were, saw the action;" in the fourth, "The secret was communicated to more persons than to him;" in the fifth, "This trade enriched some people more than it enriched them."—The suppl

Grammar, p. 207. Exercises, p. 92.

1. These rules are addressed to none but the intelligent and attentive.

The gay and pleasing are, sometimes, the most insidious and dangerous companions.

of the ellipsis certainly gives an uncouth appearance to these sentences: but this circumstance forms no solid objection to the truth of the principle for which we contend. Most of the idioms in a language could not be literally accounted for, but by very awkward modes of expression.

If the rule which has been recommended, effectually answers the purpose of ascertaining the cases of nouns and pronouns, in connexion with the words than and but, why should we have recourse to the useless expedient of changing these words into other parts of speech; especially when this expedient would often produce ambiguity, and lead into error? That it would have this effect, might be shown in numerous instances. One, however, will be sufficient. "If we use the word than, as a preposition, we should say, 'I love her better than him,' whether it be meant, 'I love her better than I love him,' or, 'I love her better than he does.' By using the word as a conjunction, the ambiguity is prevented. For, if the former sentiment is implied, we say, 'I love her better than him;' that is, 'than I love him;' if the latter, we say, 'I love her better than he,' that is, 'than he loves her.'"

If it should be said, that but and than may be properly supplied by the prepositions except and besides, and that therefore the substitution of the latter for the former must be allowable; we reply, that in numerous instances, these words cannot be properly substituted for each other. But if this could be universally done, it might still be said, that equivalence of meaning, by no means implies identity of grammatical construction. This, we think, has been fully proved at page 72, of the Grammar; the twelfth, or any subsequent edition.

From what has been advanced on this subject, the following rule may be laid down. "When the pronoun following but or than, has exactly the same bearing and relation as the preceding noun or pronoun has, with regard to other parts of the sentence, it must have the same grammatical construction." By applying this rule to the various examples already exhibited, the reader will, we doubt not, perceive its propriety and use.

Old age will prove a joyless and dreary season, if we arrive at it with an unimproved, or a corrupted mind.

The more I see of his conduct, the better I like him.

It is not only the duty, but the interest of young persons, to be studious and diligent.

2. These counsels were the dictates of virtue, and of true honour.

Avarice and cunning may acquire an estate ; but they cannot gain friends.

A taste for useful knowledge, will provide for us a great and noble entertainment, when other entertainments leave us.

That the student may be still further assisted, in his endeavours to discover the true grammatical construction of a noun or pronoun following but or than, it may not be improper to observe, that the 18th Rule of Syntax may be considered as subsidiary to the preceding rule, and to the principle of supplying the ellipsis. Thus, in the expression, " I saw nobody but him," nobody is in the objective case, governed by the verb saw ; and him is in the same case, because conjunctions, according to Rule the 18th, connect the same cases of nouns and pronouns. In the phrase, " Nobody but he was present." he is in the nominative case, because it is connected by the conjunction but, with the noun nobody, which is in the nominative. The other sentences, in which the conjunction than is used, may be construed in the same manner.

If the 18th Rule of Syntax should not appear to apply to every example which has been produced in this discussion, nor to others which might be adduced ; it will be found, on strict examination, that the supposed exceptions are, in fact, sentences which do not come within the reason and limitation of the rule. Thus, in the sentence, " I have a greater respect for them than he," the pronoun he is connected by the conjunction than with the pronoun them : and yet they are not put in the same case ; because they have not the same bearing and relation, with regard to the rest of the sentence ; which is requisite according to Rule 18th and its explanatory note. See the Grammar, page 194 of the Stereotype edition.

The two latter rules are founded on the principle of supplying the ellipsis, and are intimately connected with it : they in fact derive all their authority from that principle. They may, however, be of use to the student, by presenting the subject in different points of view : some of them may strike his attention, more than others, and lead him to a full development of the subject.

Without firmness, nothing that is great can be undertaken ; nothing that is difficult or hazardous, can be accomplished.

The anxious man is the votary of riches ; the negligent man, that of pleasure.

3. His crimes had brought him into extreme distress, and perplexity.

He has an affectionate brother and sister ; and they live in great harmony.

We must guard against too great severity, and too great facility of manners.

We should often recollect what the wisest men have said and written, concerning human happiness, and human vanity.

The Chinese language contains an immense number of words ; and he who would learn them, must possess a great memory.

By presumption and vanity, we provoke enmity, and incur contempt.

In the circumstances in which I was at that time, my troubles pressed heavily upon me.

He has destroyed his constitution, by the very same errors by which so many have been destroyed. Or—same errors that have destroyed so many.

5. He is temperate, disinterested, and benevolent ; an ornament to his family, and a credit to his profession.

Genuine virtue supposes our benevolence to be strengthened, and confirmed by principle.

Perseverance in laudable pursuits, will reward all our toils, and produce effects beyond our calculation.

It is happy for us, when we can calmly and deliberately look back on the past, and anticipate the future.

The sacrifices of virtue will not only be rewarded hereafter, but they will be recompensed even in this life.

All those who were possessed of any office, resigned their former commission. Or—All who were possessed, &c.

If young persons were determined to conduct themselves by the rules of virtue, not only would they escape innumerable dangers, but they would command respect from the licentious themselves.

Charles was a man of learning, knowledge, and benevolence ; and, what is still more, *he was a true Christian.

6. The temper of him who is always in the bustle of the world, will often be ruffled and disturbed.

We often commend, as well as censure imprudently.

How a seed grows up into a tree, and how the mind acts upon the body, are mysteries which we cannot explain.

Verily, there is a reward for the righteous! Verily there is a God that judgeth in the earth!

7. Changes are almost continually taking place, in men and manners, in opinions and customs, in private fortunes and in public conduct.

Averse either to contradict or to blame, the too complaisant man goes along with the manners that prevail.

By this habitual indelicacy, the virgins smiled at what they blushed at before.

They are now reconciled to what they could not formerly be prompted to, by any considerations.

Censure is the tax which a man pays to the public for being eminent.

Reflect on the state of human life, and on the society of men, as mixed with good and evil.

8. In all stations and conditions, the important relations take place, of masters and servants, husbands and wives, parents and children, brothers and friends, citizens and subjects.

Destitute of principle, he regarded neither his family, his friends, nor his reputation.

* The auxiliary verbs are often very properly omitted before the principal verb: as "I have seen and heard him frequently;" not "have heard:" "He will lose his estate, and incur reproach;" not "will incur." But when any thing is emphatically expressed, or when opposition is denoted, this ellipsis should be avoided: "I have seen, and I have heard him too;" "He was admired, but he was not beloved."

Religious persons are often unjustly represented as persons of romantic character, and of visionary notions; unacquainted with the world, and unfit to live in it.

No rank, nor station, no dignity of birth, nor any possessions, exempt men from contributing their share to public utility.

9. Oh, my father! my friend! how great has been my ingratitude!

Oh, Piety! Oh Virtue! how insensible have I been to your charms!

There neither is, nor ought to be, such a thing as constructive treason.

He is a new-created knight, and his dignity sits awkwardly on him. Or—a newly created knight, &c.

Hatred or revenge deserves censure wherever it is found to exist.

If you please to employ your thoughts on that subject, you will easily conceive our miserable condition.

His speech contains one of the grossest and most infamous calumnies that ever were uttered.

Too great a variety of studies dissipates and weakens the mind.

Each of those two authors has his merit.

James was resolved not to indulge himself in so cruel an amusement.

The want of attention to this rule, is the source of a very common error. Or—Want of attention, &c.

Calumny and detraction are sparks, which, if you do not blow them, will go out of themselves.

Clelia is a vain woman, who, if we do not flatter her, will be disgusted.

That celebrated work had been nearly ten years published, before its importance was at all understood.

Ambition is insatiable: it will make any sacrifices to attain its objects.

A great mass of rocks thrown together by the hand of nature, with wildness and confusion, strikes the mind with more grandeur, than if the parts had been adjusted to one another with the most accurate symmetry.

SECTION 3.

Exercises, p. 102.

HE showed a spirit of forgiveness, and a magnanimity, that do honour to human nature.

Them that honour me, I will honour; and they that despise me, shall be lightly esteemed.

Reason's whole pleasure, all the joys of sense,
Lie in three words, health, peace, and competence.

Having thus begun to throw off the restraints of reason, he was soon hurried into deplorable excesses.

These arts have enlightened many minds; and they will enlighten every person who shall attentively study them.

When we succeed in our plans, it is not always to be attributed to ourselves; the aid of others often promotes the end, and claims our acknowledgment.

Their intentions were good; but wanting prudence, they missed the mark at which they aimed.

I have not consented, nor shall I consent to a proposal so unjust.

We have subjected ourselves to much expense, that thou mayst be well educated.

This treaty was made at the castle of earl Moreton the governor.

Be especially careful, that thou give no offence to the aged or helpless.

The business was no sooner opened, than it was cordially acquiesced in.

On account of his general conduct, he deserved punishment as much as his companion, and, indeed, deserved it more. He left a son of a singular character, and who behaved so ill that he was put in prison.

If he do but approve my endeavours, it will be an ample reward.

I hope you will do me the favour, to accept a copy of "A view of the manufactories, in the West Riding of Yorkshire."

I had intended to write the letter, before he urged me to it; and, therefore, he has not all the merit of

All the power of ridicule, aided by the desertion of friends, and the diminution of his estate, was not able to shake his principles.

In his conduct was treachery, and in his words were faithless professions.

Though the measure is mysterious, it is worthy of attention.

Be solicitous to aid such deserving persons as appear to be destitute of friends.

Ignorance, or the want of light, produces sensuality, covetousness, and those violent contests with others about trifles, which occasion so much misery and so many crimes in the world.

He will one day reap the reward of his labour, if he be diligent and attentive. Till that period come, let him be contented and patient.

To the resolutions which we have once, upon due consideration, adopted as rules of conduct, let us firmly adhere.

He has little more of the great man than the title.

Though he were my superior in knowledge, he would not thence have a right to impose his sentiments.

That picture of the emperor, is a very exact resemblance of him.

How happy are the virtuous who can rest under the protection of that powerful arm, which made the earth and the heavens !

Prosperity and adversity may be equally improved : both the one and the other proceed from the same author.

He acted conformably to his instructions, and cannot justly be censured.

The orators did not forget to enlarge on so popular a subject.

The language of Divine Providence to every human agent, is, "Hitherto shalt thou come, and no farther."

Idle persons imagine, that how deficient soever they may be in point of duty, they at least consult their own satisfaction.

Good as the cause is, it is one from which numbers have deserted.

The man is prudent who speaks little.

SECTION 4.

Exercises, p. 105.

HE acted independently of foreign assistance.

Every thing that we here enjoy, changes, decays, and comes to an end. All floats on the surface of that river, which, with swift current, is running towards a boundless ocean.

The winter has not been so severe as we expected it to be. Or—expected it would be.

Temperance, more than medicines, is the proper means of curing many diseases.

They understand the practical part better than he does; but he is much better acquainted with the theory than they are.

When we have once drawn the line, with intelligence and precision, between duty and sin, that line we ought on no occasion to transgress.

They who are distinguished by extraordinary talents, have extraordinary duties to perform.

No person could speak more strongly on this subject, or behave more nobly, than our young advocate for the cause of toleration.

His conduct was so provoking, that many will condemn him, and few will pity him.

The people's happiness is the statesman's honour.

We are in a perilous situation. On the one side, and on the other, dangers meet us; and either extreme will be pernicious to virtue.

Several pictures of the Sardinian king's were transmitted to France. Or—Several of the Sardinian king's pictures, &c. Or—Several pictures belonging to the king of Sardinia, &c.

When I last saw him, he was grown considerably.

If we consult either the improvement of the mind, or the health of the body, it is well known that exercise is the great instrument of promoting both.

If it were they who acted so ungratefully, they are doubly in fault. Or—If they acted, &c.

Whether virtue promote our interest or not, we must adhere to her dictates.

We should be studious to avoid too much indulgence, as well as too much restraint, in our management of children.

No human happiness is so great, as not to contain some imperfection. Or—as to contain no imperfection.

His father cannot hope for this success, unless his son give better proofs of genius, or apply himself with indefatigable labour.

The house framed a remonstrance, in which they spoke with great freedom of the king's prerogative.

The conduct which has been mentioned, is one of those artifices, which most easily seduce men under the appearance of benevolence.

This is the person to whom we are so much obliged, and whom we expected to see, when the favour was conferred.

He is a person of great property, but he does not possess the esteem of his neighbours.

They were solicitous to ingratiate themselves with those, whom it was dishonourable to favour.

The great diversity which takes place among men, is not owing to a distinction that nature has made in their original powers, so much as to the superior diligence, with which some have improved these powers beyond others.

While we are unoccupied by what is good, evil is continually at hand.

There is not a creature that moves, nor a vegetable that grows, but which, when minutely examined, furnishes materials for pious admiration.

What can be the reason of the committee's having delayed this business? Or—What can be the committee's reason for having delayed this business?

I know not whether Charles was the author, but I understood it to be him.

A good and well-cultivated mind, is greatly preferable to rank or riches.

When charity to the poor is governed by knowledge and prudence, every one admits it to be a virtue.

His greatest concern, and highest enjoyment, was to be approved in the sight of his Creator.

Let us not set our hearts on so mutable, so unsatisfying a world.

SECTION 5.

Exercises, p. 107.

SHALL you attain success, without that preparation, and escape dangers without that precaution, which are required of others?

When we see bad men honoured and prosperous in the world, it is some discouragement to virtue.

The furniture was all purchased at Wentworth's the joiner.

Every member of the body, every bone, joint, and muscle, lies exposed to many disorders; and the greatest prudence or precaution, or the deepest skill of the physician, is not sufficient to prevent them.

It is rightly said, that though faith justifies us, yet works must justify our faith.

If an academy be established for the cultivation of our language, let the members of it stop the license of translators; whose idleness and ignorance, if they be suffered to proceed, will reduce us to babble a dialect of French.

It is of great consequence that a teacher should firmly believe, both the truth and the importance of those principles which he inculcates on others; and not only that he should speculatively believe them, but have a lively and serious feeling of them.

It is not the uttering, or the hearing of certain words, that constitutes the worship of the Almighty. It is the heart that praises, or prays. If the heart accompanies not the words that are spoken, we offer the sacrifice of fools.

Neither flatter nor contemn the rich or the great.

He has travelled much, and passed through many stormy seas, and over extensive tracts of land.

You must be sensible that there is, and can be no other person than myself, who could give the information desired. Or—no person but myself, &c.

To be patient, resigned, and thankful, under afflictions and disappointments, demonstrates genuine piety.

Alvarez was a man of corrupt principles, and detestable conduct ; and, what is still worse, he gloried in his shame.

As soon as the sense of a Supreme Being is lost, the great check is taken off, which keeps under restraint the passions of men. Mean desires, and low pleasures, take place of the greater and nobler sentiments which reason and religion inspire.

We should be careful not to follow the example of many persons, who censure the opinions, manners, and customs of others, merely because they are foreign to them.

Steady application, as well as genius and abilities, is necessary to produce eminence.

There are, in that seminary, several students who are considerably skilled in mathematical knowledge.

If Providence clothes the grass of the field, and shelters and adorns the flowers that every where grow wild amongst it, will he not much more clothe and protect his servants and children ?

We are too often hurried by the violence of passion, or ensnared by the allurements of pleasure.

High hopes, and florid views, are great enemies to tranquillity.

Year after year steals something from us ; till the decaying fabric totter of itself, and crumble at length into dust. Or—shall totter, &c.

I had intended to finish the letter before the bearer called, that he might not be detained ; but I was prevented by company.

George is the most learned and accomplished of all the students that belong to the seminary.

This excellent and well written treatise, with others that might be mentioned, was the foundation of his love of study.

There can be no doubt that the pleasures of the mind excel those of sense.

SECTION 6.

Exercises, p. 109.

THE grand temple consisted of one great edifice, and several smaller ones.

Many would gladly exchange their honours, beauty, and riches, for that more quiet and humble station, with which you are now dissatisfied.

Though the scene was a very affecting one, Louis showed little emotion on the occasion.

The climate of England is not so pleasant as that of France, Spain, or Italy.

Much of the good and evil that happen to us in this world, is owing to apparently undesigned and fortuitous events : but it is the Supreme Being who secretly directs and regulates all things.

To despise others on account of their poverty, or to value ourselves for our wealth, is a disposition highly culpable.

This task was the more easily performed, from the cheerfulness with which he engaged in it.

She lamented the unhappy fate of Lucretia, whose name seemed to her another word for chastity.

He has not yet cast off all regard for decency ; and this is the most that can be advanced in his favour.

The girls' school was formerly better conducted than the boys'. Or—than that of the boys.

The loss of his much-loved friend, or the disappointments he has met with, have occasioned the total derangement of his mental powers.

The concourse of people was so great, that we passed with difficulty.

All the women, children, and treasure, that remained in the city, fell under the victor's power.

They have already made great progress in their studies, and, if attention and diligence continue, they will soon fulfil the expectations of their friends.

His propensity to this vice, against every principle of interest and honour, is amazing.

This kind of vice, though it inhabits the upper circles of life, is not less pernicious, than that which we meet with amongst the lowest of men.

He acted agreeably to the dictates of prudence, though he was in a situation exceedingly delicate.

If I had known the distress of my friend, it would have been my duty to relieve him; and it would always have yielded me pleasure to have granted him that relief.

They admired the candour and uprightness of the countryman, as they called him.

The set of new curtains did not correspond to the pair of old blinds.

The tutor commends him for being more studious than any other pupil of the school. Or—for being the most studious pupil of the school.

Two principles in human nature reign;
Self-love to urge, and reason to restrain:
Nor this a good, nor that a bad we call;
Each works its end, to move or govern all.

Temperance and exercise, how little soever they may be regarded, are the best means of preserving health.

He has greatly blessed me; yes, even me, who, loaded with kindness, have not been sufficiently grateful.

No persons feel so much the distresses of others, as they who have experienced distress themselves.

SECTION 7.

Exercises, p. 110.

Constantinople was the point, in which were concentrated the learning and science of the world.

Disgrace not your station, by that grossness of sensuality, that levity of dissipation, or that insolence of rank, which bespeaks a little mind.

A circle, a square, a triangle, or a hexagon, pleases the eye by its regularity, as a beautiful figure.

His conduct was equally unjust and dishonourable. Or—was as unjust as it was dishonourable.

Though, at first, he began to defend himself, yet, when the proofs appeared against him, he durst not any longer contend.

Many persons will not believe that they are influenced by prejudices. Or—many persons believe that they are free from prejudices.

The pleasure or pain of one passion, differs from that of another.

The rise and fall of the tides, in this place, make a difference of about twelve feet.

Five and seven make twelve, and one make thirteen.

He did not know whom to suspect.

I intended yesterday to walk out, but I was again disappointed.

The court of Spain, which gave the order, was not aware of the consequence.

If the acquisitions which he has made, and which have qualified him to be a useful member of society, should be misapplied, he will be highly culpable.

There was much spoken and written on each side of the question; but I have chosen to suspend my decision.

Were there no bad men in the world, to vex and distress the good, these might appear in the light of harmless innocence; but they could have no opportunity of displaying fidelity, magnanimity, patience, and fortitude.

The most ignorant and savage tribes of men, when they looked round on the earth, and the heavens, could not avoid ascribing their origin to some invisible, designing cause, and feeling a propensity to adore their Creator.

Let us not forget, that something more than gentleness and modesty, than complacency of temper and affability of manners, is requisite to form a worthy man, or a true Christian.

One of the first, and the most common extremes in moral conduct, is that of placing all virtue either in justice, on the one hand, or in generosity, on the other.

It is an inflexible regard to principle, which has ever marked the characters of those who have eminently distinguished themselves in public life; who have patronised the cause of justice against powerful oppressors; who, in critical times, have supported the falling rights and liberties of men; and have reflected honour on their nation and country.

When it is with regard to trifles, that diversity or contrariety of opinions shows itself, it is childish in the last degree, if this become the ground of estranged affection. When, from such a cause, there arises any breach of friendship, human weakness is discovered in a mortifying light. In matters of serious moment, the sentiments of the best and worthiest may vary from those of their friends, according as their lines of life diverge, or as their temper, and habits of thought, present objects under different points of view. But by candid and liberal minds, unity of affection will still be preserved.

Desires and wishes are the first springs of action. When they become exorbitant, the whole character is likely to be tainted. If we suffer our fancy to create to itself words of ideal happiness; if we feed our imagination with plans of opulence and splendour; if we fix to our wishes certain stages of high advancement, or certain degrees of uncommon reputation, as the sole stations of felicity; the assured consequence will be, that we shall become unhappy in our present state; unfit for acting the part, and discharging the duties that belong to it; we shall discompose the peace and order of our minds, and shall foment many hurtful passions.

Maria always appears amiable. She never speaks severely or contemptuously.

PART IV.

PUNCTUATION.

CHAP. I.

Containing applications of the Comma, disposed under the particular Rules.

Grammar, p. 257. Exercises, p. 114.

RULE I.

THE tear of repentance brings its own relief.

Manhood is disgraced by the consequences of neglected youth.

Idleness is the great fomentor of all corruptions in the human heart.

It is honourable to be a friend to the unfortunate.

All finery is a sign of littleness.

Slovenliness and indelicacy of character commonly go hand in hand.

The friend of order has made half his way to virtue.

Too many of the pretended friendships of youth, are mere combinations in pleasure.

The indulgence of harsh dispositions, is the introduction to future misery.

The intermixture of evil in human society, serves to exercise the suffering graces and virtues of the good.

RULE II.

Grammar, p. 258. Exercises, p. 114.

Gentleness is, in truth, the great avenue to mutual enjoyment.

Charity, like the sun, brightens all its objects.

The tutor, by instruction and discipline, lays the foundation of the pupil's future honour.

Trials, in this stage of being, are the lot of man.

No assumed behaviour can always hide the real character.

The best men often experience disappointments.

Advice should be seasonably administered.

RULE III.

Self-conceit, presumption, and obstinacy, blast the prospect of many a youth.

In our health, life, possessions, connexions, pleasures, there are causes of decay imperceptibly working.

Discomposed thoughts, agitated passions, and a ruffled temper, poison every pleasure of life.

Vicissitudes of good and evil, of trials and consolations, fill up the life of man.

Health and peace, a moderate fortune, and a few friends, sum up all the undoubted articles of temporal felicity.

We have no reason to complain of the lot of man, or of the world's mutability.

RULE IV.

Grammar, p. 259. Exercises, p. 115.

An idle, trifling society is near akin to such as is corrupting.

Conscious guilt renders us mean-spirited, timorous, and base.

An upright mind will never be at a loss to discern what is just and true, lovely, honest, and of good report.

The vicious man is often looking round him, with anxious and fearful circumspection.

True friendship will, at all times, avoid a careless or rough behaviour.

Time brings a gentle and powerful opiate to all misfortunes.

RULE V.

Grammar, p. 260. Exercises, p. 116.

The man of virtue and honour will be trusted, relied upon, and esteemed.

Deliberate slowly, execute promptly.

A true friend unbosoms freely, advises justly, assists readily, adventures boldly, takes all patiently, defends resolutely, and continues a friend unchangeably.

Sensuality contaminates the body, depresses the understanding, deadens the moral feelings of the heart, and degrades man from his rank in the creation.

Idleness brings forward and nourishes many bad passions.

We must stand or fall by our own conduct and character.

The man of order catches and arrests the hours as they fly.

The great business of life is, to be employed in doing justly, loving mercy, and walking humbly with our Creator.

RULE VI.

Grammar, p. 260. Exercises, p. 116.

This unhappy person had often been seriously, affectionately admonished, but in vain.

To live soberly, righteously, and piously, comprehends the whole of our duty.

When thy friend is calumniated, openly and boldly espouse his cause.

Benefits should be long and gratefully remembered.

RULE VII.

True gentleness is native feeling, heightened and improved by principle.

The path of piety and virtue, pursued with a firm and constant spirit, will assuredly lead to happiness.

Human affairs are in continual motion and fluctuation, altering their appearance every moment, and passing into some new forms.

What can be said to alarm those of their danger, who, intoxicated with pleasures, become giddy and insolent; who, flattered by the illusions of prosperity, make light of every serious admonition, which their friends, and the changes of the world, give them?

RULE VIII.

Grammar, p. 260. Exercises, p. 117.

If, from any internal cause, a man's peace of mind be disturbed, in vain we load him with riches or honours.

Gentleness delights, above all things, to alleviate distress; and, if it cannot dry up the falling tear, to sooth at least the grieving heart.

Wherever Christianity prevails, it has discouraged, and, in some degree, abolished slavery.

We may rest assured that, by the steady pursuit of virtue, we shall obtain and enjoy it.

RULE IX.

Continue, my dear child, to make virtue thy principal study.

To you, my worthy benefactors, am I indebted, under Providence, for all I enjoy.

Canst thou expect, thou betrayer of innocence, to escape the hand of vengeance?

Come then, companion of my toils, let us take fresh courage, persevere, and hope to the end.

RULE X.

Peace of mind being secured, we may smile at misfortunes.

Virtue abandoned, and conscience reproaching us, we become terrified with imaginary evils.

Charles having been deprived of the help of tutors, his studies became totally neglected.

To prevent further altercation, I submitted to the terms proposed.

To enjoy present pleasure, he sacrificed his future ease and reputation.

To say the least, they have betrayed great want of prudence.

RULE XI.

Grammar, p. 261. Exercises, p. 118.

Hope, the balm of life, soothes us under every misfortune.

Content, the offspring of virtue, dwells both in retirement, and in the active scenes of life.

Confucius, the great Chinese philosopher, was eminently good, as well as wise.

The patriarch Joseph, is an illustrious example of chastity, resignation, and filial affection.

RULE XII.

Nothing is so opposite to the true enjoyment of life, as the relaxed and feeble state of an indolent mind.

The more a man speaks of himself, the less he likes to hear another talked of.

Nothing more strongly inculcates resignation, than the experience of our own inability to guide ourselves.

The friendships of the world, can subsist no longer than interest cements them.

Expect no more from the world than it is able to afford you.

RULE XIII.

Grammar, p. 261. Exercises, p. 118.

He who is a stranger to industry, may possess, but he cannot enjoy.

Contrition, though it may melt, ought not to sink or overpower the heart of a Christian.

The goods of this world were given to man for his occasional refreshment, not for his chief felicity.

It is the province of superiors to direct, of inferiors to obey; of the learned, to be instructive, of the ignorant, to be docile; of the old, to be communicative, of the young, to be attentive and diligent.

Though unavoidable calamities make a part, yet they make not the chief part, of the vexations and sorrows that distress human life.

An inquisitive and meddling spirit, often interrupts the good order, and breaks the peace of society.

RULE XIV.

Grammar, p. 262. Exercises, p. 118.

Vice is not of such a nature, that we can say to it, "Hitherto shalt thou come, and no further."

One of the noblest of the Christian virtues, is, "to love our enemies."

Many too confidently say to themselves, "My mountain stands strong, and it shall never be removed."

We are strictly enjoined, "not to follow a multitude to do evil."

RULE XV.

Grammar, p. 282. Exercises, p. 119.

The gentle mind is like the smooth stream, which reflects every object in its just proportion, and in its fairest colours.

Beware of those rash and dangerous connexions, which may afterwards load you with dishonour.

Blind must that man be, who discerns not the most striking marks of a Divine government, exercised over the world.

It is labour only which gives the relish to pleasure.

In that unaffected civility which springs from a gentle mind, there is an incomparable charm.

Thy who raise envy, will easily incur censure.

Many of the evils which occasion our complaints of the world, are wholly imaginary.

He who is good before invisible witnesses, is eminently so before the visible.

His conduct, so disinterested and generous, was universally approved.

RULE XVI.

Exercises, p. 124.

The fumes which arise from a heart boiling with violent passions, never fail to darken and trouble the understanding.

If we delay till to-morrow what ought to be done to-day, we overcharge the morrow with a burden which belongs not to it.

By whatever means we may at first attract the attention, we can hold the esteem, and secure the hearts of others, only by amiable dispositions, and the accomplishments of the mind.

If the mind sow not corn, it will plant thistles.

One day is sufficient to scatter our prosperity, and bring it to nought.

Graceful in youth, are the tears of sympathy, and the heart that melts at the tale of wo.

The ever active and restless power of thought, if not employed about what is good, will naturally and unavoidably engender evil.

He who formed the heart, certainly knows what passes within it.

To be humble and modest in opinion, to be vigilant and attentive in conduct, to distrust fair appearances, and to restrain rash desires, are instructions which the darkness of our present state should strongly inculcate.

RULE XVII.

Grammar, p. 263. Exercises, p. 120.

The greatest misery is, to be condemned by our own hearts.

The greatest misery that we can endure, is, to be condemned by our own hearts.

Charles's highest enjoyment was, to relieve the distressed, and to do good.

The highest enjoyment that Charles ever experienced, was, to relieve the distressed, and to do good.

RULE XVIII.

Exercises, p. 121.

If opulence increases our gratifications, it increases, in the same proportion, our desires and demands.

He whose wishes, respecting the possessions of this world, are the most reasonable and bounded, is likely to lead the safest, and, for that reason, the most desirable life.

By aspiring too high, we frequently miss the happiness, which, by a less ambitious aim, we might have gained.

By proper management, we prolong our time : we live more, in a few years, than others do in many.

In your most secret actions, suppose that you have all the world for witnesses.

In youth, the habits of industry are most easily acquired.

What is the right path, few take the trouble of inquiring.

RULE XIX.

Grammar, p. 263. Exercises, p. 121.

Providence never intended, that any state here should be either completely happy, or entirely miserable.

As a companion, he was severe and satirical; as a friend, captious and dangerous; in his domestic sphere, harsh, jealous, and irascible.

If the spring put forth no blossoms, in Summer there will be no beauty, and in Autumn, no fruit. So, if youth be trifled away without improvement, manhood will be contemptible, and old age, miserable.

RULE XX.

Be assured, then, that order, frugality, and economy, are the necessary supports, of every personal and private virtue.

I proceed, secondly, to point out the proper state of our temper, with respect to one another.

Here, every thing is in stir and fluctuation; there, all is serene, steady, and orderly.

I shall make some observations, first, on the external, and next, on the internal, condition of man.

Sometimes, timidity and false shame prevent our opposing vicious customs; frequently, expectation and interest impel us strongly to comply.

CHAP. II.

Containing insertions of the Semicolon and Comma.

Grammar, p. 264. Exercises, p. 122.

THAT darkness of character, where we can see no heart; those foldings of art through which no native affection is allowed to penetrate ; present an object, unamiable in every season of life, but particularly odious in youth.

To give an early preference to honour above gain, when they stand in competition ; to despise every advantage which cannot be attained without dishonest arts ; to brook no meanness, and to stoop to no dissimulation ; are the indications of a great mind, the presages of future eminence and usefulness in life.

As there is a worldly happiness, which God perceives to be no other than disguised misery ; as there are worldly honours, which, in his estimation, are reproach ; so there is a worldly wisdom, which, in his sight, is foolishness.

The passions are the chief destroyers of our peace ; the storms and tempests of the moral world.

Heaven is the region of gentleness and friendship ; hell, of fierceness and animosity.

The path of truth, is a plain and a safe path ; that of falsehood, is a perplexing maze.

Modesty is one of the chief ornaments of youth ; and has ever been esteemed a presage of rising merit.

Life, with a swift, though insensible course, glides away ; and, like a river which undermines its banks, gradually impairs our state.

The violent spirit, like troubled waters, renders back the images of things distorted and broken ; and communicates to them all that disordered motion, which arises solely from its own agitation.

Levity is frequently the forced production of folly or vice ; cheerfulness is the natural offspring of wisdom and virtue only.

Persons who live according to order, may be compared to the celestial bodies, which move in regular courses, and by stated laws ; whose influence is beneficent ; whose operations are quiet and tranquil.

CHAP. III.

Containing applications of the Colon, &c.

Grammar, p. 265. Exercises, p. 123.

THE three great enemies to tranquillity, are vice, superstition, and idleness: vice, which poisons and disturbs the mind with bad passions; superstition, which fills it with imaginary terrors; idleness, which loads it with tediousness and disgust.

To sail on the tranquil surface of an unruffled lake, and to steer a safe course through a troubled and stormy ocean, require different talents: and, alas! human life oftener resembles the stormy ocean, than the unruffled lake.

When we look forward to the year which is beginning, what do we behold there? All, my brethren, is a blank to our view: a dark unknown presents itself.

Happy would the poor man think himself, if he could enter on all the treasures of the rich: and happy for a short time he might be: but before he had long contemplated and admired his state, his possessions would seem to lessen, and his cares would grow.

By doing, or at least endeavouring to do, our duty to God and man; by acquiring an humble trust in the mercy and favour of God, through Jesus Christ; by cultivating our minds, and properly employing our time and thoughts; by governing our passions and our temper; by correcting all unreasonable expectations from the world, and from men; and, in the midst of worldly business, habituating ourselves to calm retreat and serious recollection: by such means as these, it may be hoped, that, through the Divine blessing, our days shall flow in a stream as unruffled as the human state admits.

A Metaphor is a comparison, expressed in an abridged form, but without any of the words that denote comparison: as, "To the upright there ariseth light in darkness."

All our conduct towards men, should be influenced by this important precept: "Do unto others, as you would that others should do unto you."

Philip III. king of Spain, when he drew near the end of his days, seriously reflecting on his past life, and greatly affected with the remembrance of his mispent time, expressed his deep regret in these terms: "Ah! how happy would it have been for me, had I spent, in retirement, these twenty-three years, that I have possessed my kingdom!"

Often is the smile of gaiety assumed, whilst the heart aches within: though folly may laugh, guilt will sting.

There is no mortal truly wise and restless at once: wisdom is the repose of minds.

Grammar, p. 266. Exercises, p. 125.

THE absence of evil is a real good. Peace, quiet, exemption from pain, should be a continual feast.

Worldly happiness ever tends to destroy itself, by corrupting the heart. It fosters the loose and the violent passions. It engenders noxious habits; and taints the mind with false delicacy, which makes it feel a thousand unreal evils.

Feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, comforting the afflicted, yield more pleasure than we receive from those actions which respect only ourselves. Benevolence may, in this view, be termed the most refined self-love.

The resources of virtue remain entire, when the days of trouble come. They remain with us in sickness, as in health; in poverty, as in the midst of riches; in our dark and solitary hours, no less than when surrounded with friends and cheerful society. The mind of a good man is a kingdom to him, and he can always enjoy it.

We ruin the happiness of life, when we attempt to raise it too high. A tolerable and comfortable state, is all that we can propose to ourselves on earth. Peace and contentment, not bliss, nor transport, are the full portion of man. Perfect joy is reserved for heaven.

If we look around us, we shall perceive that the whole universe is full of active powers. Action is indeed the genius of nature. By motion and exertion, the system of being is preserved in vigour. By its different parts always acting in subordination one to another, the perfection of the whole is carried on. The heavenly bodies perpetually revolve. Day and night incessantly repeat their appointed course. Continual operations are going on in the earth, and in the waters. Nothing stands still.

Constantine the Great, was advanced to the sole dominion of the Roman World, A. D. 325; and soon after openly professed the Christian faith.

The letter concludes with this remarkable Post-script: "P. S. Though I am innocent of the charge, and have been bitterly persecuted, yet I cordially forgive my enemies and persecutors."

The last edition of that valuable work, was carefully compared with the Original MS.

Grammar, p. 267. Exercises, p. 126.

BEAUTY and strength, combined with virtue and piety,—how lovely in the sight of men! how pleasing to Heaven! peculiarly pleasing, because with every temptation to deviate, they voluntarily walk in the path of duty.

Something there is more needful than expense;
And something previous e'en to taste;—'tis sense.

“I'll live to-morrow,” will a wise man say?
To-morrow is too late:—then live to-day.

Griper has long been ardently endeavouring to fill his chest: and lo! it is now full. Is he happy? and does he use it? Does he gratefully think of the Giver of all good things? Does he distribute to the poor? Alas! these interests have no place in his breast.

What is there in all the pomp of the world, the enjoyments of luxury, the gratification of passion, comparable to the tranquil delight of a good conscience.

To lie down on the pillow, after a day spent in temperance, in beneficence, and in piety, how sweet is it!

We wait till to-morrow to be happy: alas! why not to-day? Shall we be younger? Are we sure we shall be healthier? Will our passions become feebler, and our love of the world less?

What shadow can be more vain than the life of a great part of mankind? Of all that eager and bustling crowd which we behold on earth, how few discover the path of true happiness! how few can we find whose activity has not been misemployed, and whose course terminates not in confessions of disappointment!

On the one hand, are the divine approbation, and immortal honour; on the other, (remember and beware,) are the stings of conscience, and endless infamy.

As, in riper years, all unseasonable returns to the levity of youth ought to be avoided, (an admonition which equally belongs to both the sexes,) still more are we to guard against those intemperate indulgences of pleasure, to which the young are unhappily prone.

The bliss of man, (could pride that blessing find;)
Is not to act or think beyond mankind.

Or why so long (in life if long can be)
Lent Heav'n a parent to the poor and me?

CHAP. VI.

Corrections of the promiscuous instances of defective Punctuation.

SECTION I.

Exercises, p. 128.

WHEN Socrates was asked, what man approached the nearest to perfect happiness, he answered: "That man who has the fewest wants."

She who studies her glass, neglects her heart.

Between passion and lying, there is not a finger's breadth.

The freer we feel ourselves in the presence of others, the more free are they : he who is free, makes free.

Addison has remarked, with equal piety and truth, "that the creation is a perpetual feast to the mind of a good man."

He who shuts out all evasion when he promises, loves truth.

The laurels of the warrior are dyed in blood; and bedewed with the tears of the widow and the orphan.

Between fame and true honour, a distinction is to be made. The former is a loud and noisy applause: the latter, a more silent and internal homage. Fame floats on the breath of the multitude: honour rests on the judgment of the thinking. Fame may give praise, while it withholds esteem: true honour implies esteem mingled with respect. The one regards particular distinguished talents: the other looks up to the whole character.

There is a certain species of religion, (if we can give it that name,) which is placed wholly in speculation and belief; in the regularity of external homage; or in fiery zeal about contested opinions.

Xenophanes, who was reproached with being timorous, because he would not venture his money in a game at dice, made this manly and sensible reply: "I confess I am exceedingly timorous; for I dare not commit an evil action."

He loves nobly, (I speak of friendship,) who is not jealous, when he has partners of love.

Our happiness consists in the pursuit, much more than in the attainment, of any temporal good.

Let me repeat it;—he only is great who has the habits of greatness.

Prosopopoeia, or personification, is a rhetorical figure, by which we attribute life and action to inanimate objects: as, "The ground thirsts for rain;" "The earth smiles with plenty."

The proper and rational conduct of men, with regard to futurity, is regulated by two considerations: first, that much of what it contains, must remain to us absolutely unknown; next, that there are also some events in it which may be certainly known and foreseen.

The gardens of the world produce only deciduous flowers. Perennial ones must be sought in the delightful regions above. Roses without thorns are the growth of paradise alone.

How many rules and maxims of life might be spared, could we fix a principle of virtue within; and inscribe the living sentiment of the love of God in the affections! He who loves righteousness, is master of all the distinctions in morality.

He who, from the benignity of his nature, erected this world for the abode of men; he who furnished it so richly for our accommodation, and stored it with so much beauty for our entertainment; he who, since first we entered into life, hath followed us with such a variety of mercies: this amiable and beneficent Being, surely can have no pleasure in our disappointment and distress. He knows our frame; he remembers we are dust; and looks to frail man, we are assured, with such pity as a father beareth to his children.

: One of the first lessons, both of religion and of wisdom, is, to moderate our expectations and hopes; and not to set forth on the voyage of life, like men who expect to be always carried forward with a favourable gale. Let us be satisfied if the path we tread be easy and smooth, though it be not strewed with flowers.

Providence never intended, that the art of living happily in this world should depend on that deep penetration, that acute sagacity, and those refinements of thought, which few possess. It has dealt more graciously with us; and made happiness depend on uprightness of intention, much more than on extent of capacity.

Most of our passions flatter us in their rise. But their beginnings are treacherous; their growth is imperceptible; and the evils which they carry in their train, lie concealed, until their dominion is established. What Solomon says of one of them, holds true of them all, "that their beginning is as when one letteth out water." It issues from a small chink, which once might have been easily stopped; but being neglected, it is soon widened by the stream; till the bank is at last totally thrown down, and the flood is at liberty to deluge the whole plain.

Prosperity debilitates, instead of strengthening the mind. Its most common effect is, to create an extreme sensibility to the slightest wound. It fomented impatient desires; and raises expectations which no success can satisfy. It fosters a false delicacy, which sickens in the midst of indulgence. By repeated gratification, it blunts the feelings of men to what is pleasing; and leaves them unhappily acute to whatever is uneasy. Hence, the gale which another would scarcely feel, is, to the prosperous, a rude tempest. Hence, the rose-leaf doubled below them on the couch, as it is told of the effeminate Sybarite, breaks their rest. Hence, the disrespect shown by Mordecai, preyed with such violence on the heart of Haman.

Anxiety is the poison of human life. It is the parent of many sins, and of more miseries. In a world where every thing is so doubtful; where we may succeed in our wish, and be miserable; where we may be disappointed, and be blessed in the disappointment; what mean this restless stir and commotion of mind? Can our solicitude alter the course, or unravel the intricacy, of human events? Can our curiosity pierce through the cloud, which the Supreme Being hath made impenetrable to mortal eye?

No situation is so remote, and no station so unfavourable, as to preclude access to the happiness of a future state. A road is opened by the Divine Spirit to those blissful habitations, from all corners of the earth, and from all conditions of human life; from the peopled city, and from the solitary desert; from the cottages of the poor, and from the palaces of kings; from the dwellings of ignorance and simplicity, and from the regions of science and improvement.

The scenes which present themselves, at our entering upon the world, are commonly flattering. Whatever they be in themselves, the lively spirits of the young gild every opening prospect. The field of hope appears to stretch wide before them. Pleasure seems to put forth its blossoms on every side. Impelled by desire, forward they rush with inconsiderate ardour; prompt to decide, and to choose; averse to hesitate, or to inquire; credulous, because untaught by experience; rash, because unacquainted with danger; headstrong, because unsubdued by disappointment. Hence arise the perils to which they are exposed; and which too often, from want of attention to faithful admonition, precipitate them into ruin irretrievable.

By the unhappy excesses of irregular pleasure in youth, how many amiable dispositions are corrupted or destroyed! How many rising capacities and powers are suppressed! How many flattering hopes of parents and friends are totally extinguished! Who but must drop a tear over human nature, when he beholds that morning which arose so bright, overcast with such untimely darkness; that sweetness of temper which once engaged many hearts, that modesty which was so prepossessing, those abilities which promised extensive usefulness, all sacrificed at the shrine of low sensuality: and one who was formed for passing through life, in the midst of public esteem, cut off by his vices at the beginning of his course; or sunk, for the whole or it, into insignificance and contempt? These, O sinful Pleasure! are thy trophies. It is thus that, co-operating with the foe of God and man, thou degradest human honour, and blastest the opening prospects of human felicity.

SECTION 2.

EXAMPLES IN POETRY.

Exercises, p. 133.

Where thy true treasure? Gold says, "Not in me:"
And "Not in me," the Di'mond. Gold is poor.

The scenes of bus'ness tell us—what are men;
The scenes of pleasure—what is all beside.

Wo then apart, (if wo apart can be
From mortal man,) and fortune at our nod,
The gay, rich, great, triumphant, and august,
What are they? The most happy (strange to say!)
Convince me most of human misery.

All this dread order break—for whom? for thee?
Vile worm!—O madness! pride! impiety!

Man, like the gen'rous vine, supported lives;
The strength he gains, is from th' embrace he gives.

Know, Nature's children all divide her care:
The fur that warms a monarch, warm'd a bear.
While man exclaims, "See all things for my use!"
"See man for mine," replies a pamper'd goose.
And just as short of reason he must fall,
Who thinks all made for one, not one for all.

Th' Almighty, from his throne, on earth surveys
Nought greater than an-honest, humble heart:
An humble heart his residence pronounc'd,
His second seat.

Bliss there is none, but unprecious bliss.
That is the gem: sell all and purchase that:

Why go a begging to contingencies,
Not gain'd with ease, nor safely lov'd, if gain'd ?

There is a time, when toil must be preferr'd,
Or joy, by mistim'd fondness, is undone.
A man of pleasure is a man of pains.

Thus nature gives us (let it check our pride)
The virtue nearest to our vice allied.

See the sole bliss Heav'n could on all bestow !
Which who but feels can taste, but thinks can know :
Yet poor with fortune, and with learning blind,
The bad must miss ; the good untaught will find.

Whatever is, is right.—This world, 'tis true,
Was made for Cæsar,—but for Titus too.
And which more bless'd ? who chain'd his country, say,
Or he whose virtue sigh'd to lose a day ?

The first sure symptom of a mind in health,
Is rest of heart, and pleasure felt at home.

True happiness resides in things unseen.
No smiles of fortune ever bless the bad ;
Nor can her frowns rob innocence of joy.

Oh the dark days of vanity ! while here,
How tasteless ! and how terrible, when gone !
Gone ! they ne'er go : when past, they haunt us still.

Father of light and life ! Thou good supreme !
O teach me what is good ! Teach me thyself ;
Save me from folly, vanity, and vice,
From ev'ry low pursuit ; and feed my soul
With knowledge, conscious peace, and virtue pure,
Sacred, substantial, never fading bliss !

If I am right, thy grace impart,
Still in the right to stay :
If I am wrong, O teach my heart
To find that better way.

Save me alike from foolish pride,
Or impious discontent,
At aught thy wisdom has denied,
Or aught thy goodness lent.

O lost to virtue, lost to manly thought,
Lost to the noble sallies of the soul,
Who think it solitude to be alone !
Communion sweet, communion large and high,
Our reason, guardian angel, and our God.
Then nearest these, when others most remote ;
And all, ere long, shall be remote, but these.

Benevolence.

God loves from whole to parts ; but human soul
Must rise from individual to the whole.
Self-love but serves the virtuous mind to wake,
As the small pebble stirs the peaceful lake :
The centre mov'd, a circle straight succeeds ;
Another still, and still another spreads,
Friend, parent, neighbour, first it will embrace ;
His country next ; and next all human race :
Wide, and more wide th' o'erflowings of the mind,
Take ev'ry creature in of ev'ry kind.
Earth smiles around, with boundless bounty blest ;
And Heav'n beholds its image in his breast.

Happiness.

Know then this truth, (enough for man to know,)
" Virtue alone is happiness below :"
The only point where human bliss stands still,
And tastes the good without the fall to ill ;
Where only merit constant pay receives ;
Is blest in what it takes, and what it gives,
The joy unequal'd if its end it gain ;
And if it lose, attended with no pain :
Without satiety, tho' e'er so blest ;
And but more relish'd as the more distress'd :
The broadest mirth unfeeling folly wears,
Less pleasing far than virtue's very tears.
Good, from each object, from each place acquir'd ;
For ever exercis'd, yet never tir'd ;
Never elated while one man's oppress'd ;
Never dejected while another's bless'd ;
And where no wants, no wishes can remain ;
Since but to wish more virtue, is to gain.

Gratitude.

When all thy mercies, O my God !
My rising soul surveys,
Transported with the view, I'm lost
In wonder, love, and praise.

O how shall words with equal warmth,
The gratitude declare,
That glows within my ravish'd heart ?
But thou canst read it there.

Thy providence my life sustain'd,
 And all my wants redress'd,
 When in the silent womb I lay,
 And hung upon the breast.

To all my weak complaints and cries,
 Thy mercy lent an ear,
 Ere yet my feeble thoughts had learn'd
 To form themselves in pray'r.

Unnumber'd comforts to my soul
 Thy tender care bestow'd,
 Before my infant heart conceiv'd
 From whom those comforts flow'd.

When, in the slipp'ry paths of youth,
 With heedless steps, I ran,
 Thine arm, unseen, convey'd me safe,
 And led me up to man.

Through hidden dangers, toils, and death,
 It gently clear'd my way ;
 And through the pleasing snares of vice,
 More to be fear'd than they.

When worn with sickness, oft hast thou,
 With health renew'd my face ;
 And when in sin and sorrow sunk,
 Reviv'd my soul with grace.

Thy bounteous hand, with worldly bliss,
 Has made my cup run o'er ;
 And, in a kind and faithful friend,
 Has doubled all my store.

Ten thousand thousand precious gifts
 My daily thanks employ ;
 Nor is the least, a cheerful heart,
 That tastes those gifts with joy.

Through ev'ry period of my life,
 Thy goodness I'll pursue !
 And, after death, in distant worlds,
 The glorious theme renew.

When nature fails, and day and night
 Divide thy works no more,
 My ever grateful heart, O Lord !
 Thy mercy shall adore.

Through all eternity to thee
 A joyful song I'll raise ;
 For O ! eternity's too short
 To utter all thy praise.

The Voyage of Life.

Self-flatter'd, unexperienc'd, high in hope,
 When young, with sanguine cheer, and streamers gay,
 We cut our cable, launch into the world,
 And fondly dream each wind and star our friend,
 All in some darling enterprize embark'd.
 But where is he can fathom its event ?
 Amid a multitude of artless hands,
 (Ruin's sure perquisite, her lawful prize,)
 Some steer aright : but the black blast blows hard,
 And puffs them wide of hope. With hearts of proof,
 Full against wind and tide, some win their way ;
 And when strong effort has deserv'd the port,
 And tugg'd it into view, 'tis won ! 'tis lost !
 Though strong their oar, still stronger is their fate :
 They strike ; and, while they triumph, they expire,
 In stress of weather, most, some sink outright.
 O'er them, and o'er their names, the billows close,
 To-morrow knows not they were ever born.
 Others a short memorial leave behind,
 Like a flag floating, when the bark's engulf'd,
 It floats a moment, and is seen no more :
 One Cæsar lives ; a thousand are forgot,
 How few, favour'd by ev'ry element,
 With swelling sails make good the promis'd port,
 With all their wishes freighted ! Yet ev'n these,
 Freight with all their wishes, soon complain.
 Free from misfortune, not from nature free,
 They still are men ; and when is man secure ?
 As fatal time as storm. The rush of years
 Beats down their strength ; their numberless escapes
 In ruin end : and, now, their proud success
 But plants new terrors on the victor's brow.
 What pain, to quit the world just made their own !
 Their nests so deeply down'd, and built so high !—
 Too low they build, who build beneath the stars.

WE should be daily employed in doing good.

I am wearied with seeing so perverse a disposition.

I know not who has done this thing.

He is in no wise thy inferior; and, in this instance, is not at all to blame.

The assistance was welcome, and seasonably afforded.

For want of employment, he wandered idly about the fields.

We ought to live soberly, righteously, and piously in the world.

He was long indisposed, and at length died of melancholy.

That word follows the general rule, and takes the penultimate accent.

He was an extraordinary genius, and attracted much attention.

The haughtiness of Florio was very ungraceful, and disgusted both his friends and strangers.

He charged me with want of resolution, but in this censure he was greatly mistaken.

They have manifested great candour in all the transaction.

The conformity of the thought to truth and nature greatly recommended it.

The importance, as well as the authenticity of the books, has been clearly displayed.

It is difficult to discover the spirit and design of some laws.

The disposition which he exhibited, was both unnatural and uncomfortable.

His natural severity rendered him a very unpopular speaker.

The inquietude of his mind, made his station and wealth far from being enviable.

I received the gift with pleasure, but I shall now more gladly resign it. Or—with greater pleasure resign it.

These are things of the highest importance to the growing age.

I am grieved with the view of so many blank leaves, in the book of my life.

I repent that I have so long walked in the paths of folly.

I think that I am not mistaken in an opinion, which I have so well considered.

They thought it an important subject, and the question was strenuously debated on both sides.

Thy speech betrays thee; for thou art a Galilean.

Let us not give too hasty credit to stories which may injure our neighbour: perhaps they are the offspring of calumny, or misapprehension.

The gardens were void of simplicity and elegance; and exhibited much that was glaring and whimsical.

SECTION I.

I would as readily do it myself, as persuade another to do it.

Of the justness of his measures he convinced his opponent, by the force of argument.

He is not, in any degree, better than those whom he so liberally condemns.

He insists upon security, and will not liberate him till it be obtained.

The meaning of the phrase, as I understand it, is very different from the common acceptation.

The favourable moment should be embraced ; for he does not continue long in one mind.

He exposed himself so much amongst the people, that he was once or twice in danger of having his head broken.

He was very dexterous in penetrating the views and designs of others.

If a little care were bestowed upon his education, he might be very useful amongst his neighbours.

He might have perceived, by a transient view, the difficulties to which his conduct exposed him.

If I should have a little leisure to-morrow, I intend to pay them a short visit.

This performance is of the same value as the other.

The scene was new, and he was seized with wonder at all he saw.

An eloquent speaker may give more numerous, but cannot give more convincing arguments, than this plain man offered. Or—may give more, but cannot give stronger, &c.

These persons possessed very moderate intellects, even before they had impaired them by the extravagance of passion.

True wit is nature dressed to advantage; but some works have more ornament than does them good.

The sharks, that prey upon the inadvertency of young heirs, are more pardonable than those, who trespass upon the good opinion of persons that treat them with great confidence and respect.

Honour teaches us properly to respect ourselves, and to violate no right or privilege of our neighbour: it leads us to support the feeble, to relieve the distressed, and to scorn to be governed by degrading and injurious passions. It must, therefore, be a false and mistaken honour, that prompts the destroyer to take the life of his friend.

He will always be with you, to support and comfort you, and in some measure to prosper your labours; and he will also be with all his faithful ministers, who shall succeed you in his service.

By this expression, I do not mean what some persons annex to it.

The neglect of timely precaution was the cause of this great loss.

All the sophistry which has been employed, cannot obscure so plain a truth.

Disputing should always be so managed, as to remind us, that the only end of it is truth.

My friend was so ill that he could not sit up at all, but was obliged to lie continually in bed.

A certain prince, it is said, when he invaded the Egyptians, placed, in the front of his army, a number of cats and other animals, which were worshipped by those people. A reverence for these creatures, made the Egyptians lay down their arms, and become an easy conquest.

The presence of the Deity, and the interest which so august a Being is supposed to take in our concerns, is a source of consolation.

And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall, and had sat down together, Peter sat down among them.

By the slavish disposition of the senate and people of Rome, under the emperors, the wit and eloquence of the age were wholly turned towards panegyric. Or—wholly employed in panegyric.

The refreshment came in seasonably, before they had lain down to rest.

We speak what we do know, and testify that which we have seen.

They shall fly as the eagle that hasteth to eat.

The wicked flee when no man pursueth : but the righteous are bold as a lion.

A creature of a more exalted kind

THIS great politician desisted from his designs, when he found them impracticable.

He was of so high and independent a spirit, that he abhorred being in debt.

Though raised to an exalted station, she was a pattern of piety and virtue.

The human body may be divided into the head, the trunk, and the limbs.

His end soon approached ; and he died with great fortitude.

He was a man of so much pride, that he despised the sentiments of others.

Poverty induces dependence ; and dependence increases corruption.

This man, on all occasions, treated his inferiors with great disdain.

There can be no order in the life of that man, who does not allot a due share of his time, to retirement and reflection.

Such equivocal expressions, mark an intention to deceive.

His cheerful, happy temper, keeps up a kind of daylight in his mind, and fills it with a steady and perpetual serenity.

HENCE appears the impossibility that an undertaking so managed, should prove successful.

May we not here say with the poet, that "virtue is its own reward?"

Had he died before, would not this art have been then wholly unknown?

Not to exasperate him, I spoke only a very few words.

The works of art receive a great advantage, from the resemblance which they have to those of nature; because here not only the similitude is pleasant, but the pattern is perfect.

It may be proper to give some account of those practices, anciently used on such occasions, and discontinued only through the neglect and degeneracy of later times.

Sixtus the fourth was, if I mistake not, a great collector at least of books.

If Louis XIV. was not the greatest king, he was at least the best actor of majesty, that ever filled a throne.

These forms of conversation, multiplied, by degrees, and grew troublesome.

Nor does ~~this false~~ modesty expose us to such actions only as are indiscreet, but very often to such as are highly criminal.

By greatness, I do not mean the bulk of any single object only, but the largeness of a whole view. Or—I mean not only the bulk of any single object, but, &c.

I was formerly engaged in that business, but I shall never be concerned in it again.

We frequently do those things, which we afterwards repent of.

By often doing the same thing, it becomes habitual.

Most nations, even the Jews not excepted, were prone to idolatry.

Raised to greatness without merit, he employed his power solely for the gratification of his passions.

THE embarrassments of the artificers, rendered the progress of the work very slow.

He found the place replete with wonders, with the contemplation of which he proposed to solace himself, if he should never be able to accomplish his flight.

They are now engaged in a study, the usefulness of which they have long wished to know.

This was an undertaking, which, in the execution, proved as impracticable, as every other of their pernicious, yet abortive schemes, had turned out.

He thought that the presbyters would soon become more dangerous to the magistrates, than the prelatical clergy had ever been.

Frederic, seeing it was impossible, with safety, to trust his life in their hands, was obliged to take the Mahometans for his guard.

The emperor refused to convert the truce at once into a definitive treaty.

In the night, however, the miserable remains were taken down.

I have, in this paper, by way of introduction, settled the meaning of those pleasures of the imagination, which are the subject of my present undertaking; and endeavoured, by several considerations, to recommend to my readers, the pursuit of those pleasures: I shall in my next paper examine the several sources from whence these pleasures are derived.

Sir Francis Bacon, in his Essay upon Health, in which he particularly dissuades the reader from knotty and subtle disquisitions, has not thought it improper to prescribe to him a poem, or a prospect; and he advises him to pursue studies that fill the mind with splendid and illustrious objects, as history, poetry, and contemplations of nature.

The English reader, if he would see the notion explained at large, may find it in Locke's Essay on the Human Understanding.

Fields of corn form a pleasant prospect; and if a little care were bestowed on the walks that lie between them, they would display neatness, regularity, and elegance.

Though religion will indeed bring us under some restraints, they are not only tolerable, but, on the whole, desirable.

I have confined myself to those methods for the advancement of piety, which, by a strict execution of the laws, are in the power of a prince, limited like ours.

This morning, when, with great care and diligence, one of the gay females was looking over some hoods and ribands, brought by her tirewoman, I employed no less in examining the box which contained them.

Since it is necessary that there should be a perpetual intercourse of buying and selling, and dealing upon credit, the honest dealer, where fraud is permitted or connived at, or has no law to punish it, is often undone, and the knave gets the advantage.

Though energetic brevity is not adapted alike to every subject, we ought, on every occasion, to avoid its contrary, a languid redundancy of words. It is sometimes proper to be copious, but never to be verbose.

A monarchy, limited like ours, may, for aught I know, be placed, as it has often been represented, just in the middle point, from whence a deviation leads, on the one hand, to tyranny, and, on the other, to anarchy.

Having already shown how the fancy is affected by the works of nature, and afterwards considered, in general, how, in forming such scenes as are most apt to delight the mind of the beholder, the works both of nature and of art assist each other; I shall in this paper throw together some reflections, &c.

Let but one brave, great, active, disinterested man arise, and he will be received, followed, and venerated.

Ambition creates hatred, shiness, discords, seditions, and wars.

The scribes made it their profession to study and to teach, the law of Moses.

Sloth saps the foundation of every virtue, and pours upon us a deluge of crimes and evils.

What he says, is true, but it is not applicable to the point.

The French marched precipitately as to an assured victory; whereas the English advanced very slowly, and discharged such flights of arrows, as did great execution. When the former drew near the archers, the latter perceiving that they were out of breath, charged them with great vigour.

He was at a window in Lichfield, taking a view of the Cathedral, where a party of the royalists had fortified themselves.

We no where meet with a more splendid or pleasing show in nature, than what is formed in the heavens at the rising and setting of the sun, by the different stains of light, which show themselves in clouds of different situations.

There will be found, throughout this kingdom, a round million of creatures in human figure, whose whole subsistence, &c.

It is the custom of the Mahometans, if they see upon the ground, any printed or written paper, to take it up, and lay it aside carefully, as not knowing but it may contain some piece of their Alcoran.

The laws of nature are, truly, what lord Bacon styles his aphorisms, laws of laws. Civil laws are always imperfect, and are often false deductions from them, or applications of them; nay, civil laws stand, in many instances, in direct opposition to the laws of nature.

It has not a sentiment in it, says Pope, that the author does not religiously believe.

Many act so directly contrary to this method, that, from a habit, which they acquired at the University, of saving time and paper, they write in so diminutive a manner, that they can hardly read what they have written.

Thus I have fairly given you my own opinion, relating to this weighty affair, as well as that of a great majority of both houses here; upon which I am confident you may securely reckon.

If, from the earliest periods of life, we trace a youth who has been well educated, we shall perceive the wisdom of the maxims here recommended.

THE notions of lord Sunderland were always good. This nobleman, however, was a man of great expense.

In this uneasy state, both of his public and private life, Cicero was oppressed by a new and deep affliction, the death of his beloved daughter Tullia; which happened soon after her divorce from Dolabella. The manners and humours of this man were entirely disagreeable to Tullia.

The sun approaching melts the snow, and breaks the icy fetters of the main. Here, vast sea-monsters pierce through floating islands, with arms which can withstand the crystal rock; whilst others, that of themselves seem great as islands, are, by their bulk alone, armed against all but man. The superiority which he possesses over creatures of a size and force so stupendous, should make him mindful of his privilege of reason; and force him humbly to adore the great Composer of these wondrous frames, and the Author of his own superior wisdom.

I single Strada out among the moderns, because he had the foolish presumption to censure Tacitus, and to write history himself. My friend will forgive this short excursion in honour of a favourite writer.

Boast not thyself of to-morrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth. For the same re' son, despair not of to-morrow ; it may bring forth good as well as evil. Vex not thyself with imaginary fears. The impending black cloud, which is regarded with so much dread, may pass by harmless ; or though it should discharge the storm, yet before it breaks, thou mayst be lodged in that lowly mansion which no storms ever touch.

SECTION 3.

Disappointments will often happen to the best and wisest men ; sometimes to the wisest and best concerted plans. They may happen too, not through any imprudence of those who have devised the plan, nor even through the malice or ill design of others ; but merely in consequence of some of those cross incidents of life, which could not be foreseen.

Without some degree of patience exercised under injuries, human life would be rendered a state of perpetual hostility: offences and retaliations would succeed to one another in endless train.

Never delay till to-morrow, what reason and conscience tell you ought to be performed to-day. To-morrow is not yours ; and though you should live to enjoy it, you must not overload it with a burden not its own.

We must not imagine that there is, in true religion, any thing which overcasts the mind with sullen gloom and melancholy austerity ; or which derogates from that esteem, which men are generally disposed to yield to exemplary virtues. False ideas may be entertained of religion, as false and imperfect conceptions of virtue have often prevailed in the world.

The reason of his sudden departure, was, that the case did not admit of delay.

The people gained nothing farther by this step, than to suspend their misery. Or—nothing by this step, but the suspension of their misery.

I have here supposed that the reader is acquainted with that great modern discovery, which is, at present, universally acknowledged by the inquirers into natural philosophy.

Few words in the English language, are employed in a more loose and uncircumscribed sense, than fancy and imagination.

I intend to make use of these words in my following speculations, that the reader may rightly conceive the subject upon which I proceed.

Commend me to an argument like a flail, against which there is no fence.

How many are there, by whom these good tidings were never heard!

These points have been illustrated in so plain a manner, that the perusal of the book has given me satisfaction.

However clear the conduct which he ought to have pursued, he had not resolution to set about it.

I was much moved on this occasion, and left the place full of serious reflections.

They are of those that rebel against the light; they know not its ways, nor abide in its paths.

This measure may afford some profit, and some amusement. Or—both profit and amusement.

By a multiplicity of words, the sentiments are not set off and accommodated; but, like David equipped in Saul's armour, they are encumbered and oppressed.

Though closely occupied with the affairs of the nation, he did not neglect the concerns of his friends.

If, on the contrary, secrecy had been enjoyed, his conduct was very culpable.

Less capacity, but more time, is required for this business.

He did not mention Leonora, nor her father's death.

The combatants encountered with such rage, that, eager only to assail, and thoughtless of defence, they fell dead upon the field together.

I shall begin with remarking the defects, and shall then proceed to describe the excellences, of this plan of education.

Numberless orders of beings, to us unknown, people the wide extent of the universe.

His extraordinary beauty struck observers with admiration. Or—His beauty was so extraordinary, that it struck, &c.

Thought and language act and re-act upon each other. Or—act upon each other mutually.

Their interests were inseparably connected.

Employing all the circumspection which reason can suggest, let your prayers, at the same time, continually ascend to heaven for support. Or—While you employ all the circumspection which reason can suggest, let your prayers continually ascend to heaven for support.

THE enemy said, I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil.

While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter, and day and night, shall not cease.

A man should endeavour to make the sphere of his innocent pleasures as wide as possible, that he may retire to them with safety, and find in them such a satisfaction as a wise man would not blush to take. This advantage we gain by means of the pleasures of imagination. Or—This satisfaction we enjoy, by means of, &c.

The army was composed of Grecians, and Carians, and Lycians, and Pamphyliaus, and Phrygians.

The body of this animal was strong, proportionable, and beautiful.

Nothing promotes knowledge more than steady application, and a habit of observation.

Though virtue borrows no assistance from the advantages of fortune, yet it may often be accompanied by them.

The knowledge which he has acquired, and the habits of application which he possesses, will probably render him very useful.

Their idleness, their luxury and pleasures, their criminal deeds, their immoderate passions, their timidity and baseness of mind, have dejected them to such degree, as to make them weary of life.

I was greatly affected, so that I was obliged to leave the place, though my assistance had been pressingly solicited.

I strenuously opposed those measures, but it was not in my power to prevent them.

I yielded to his solicitation, for I perceived the necessity of doing so.

For the wisest purposes, Providence has designed our state to be checkered with pleasure and pain. As such let us receive it, and make the best of what is appointed to be our lot.

In the time of prosperity, he had stored his mind with useful knowledge, with good principles, and virtuous dispositions: and these resources remain entire, when the days of trouble come.

He had made considerable advances in knowledge, though he was very young, and laboured under several disadvantages.

SECTION 3.

Grammar, p. 303. Exercises, p. 163.

I HAVE, with a good deal of attention, considered the subject upon which I was desired to communicate my thoughts.

Whether, in any country, a choice altogether unexceptionable has been made, seems doubtful.

Let us endeavour to establish to ourselves an interest in him, who in his hands holds the reins of the whole creation.

Virgil, who, in the sixth book of his Æneid, has cast the whole system of platonic philosophy, so far as it relates to the soul of man, into beautiful allegories, gives us the punishment, &c.

And, at last, in the Pyrenean treaty, Philip the fourth was obliged to conclude a peace, on terms repugnant to his inclination, to that of his people, to the interest of Spain, and to that of all Europe.

By a late calculation, it appears that, in Great Britain and Ireland, there are upwards of fifteen millions of inhabitants.

And although persons of a virtuous and learned education, when they come forward into the great world, may be, and too often are, drawn by the temptations of youth, and the opportunities of a large fortune, into some irregularities, it is ever with reluctance and compunction of mind, because their bias to virtue still continues.

Were instruction an essential circumstance in epic poetry, I doubt whether, in any language, a single instance could be given of this species of composition.

Some of our most eminent writers have, as far as it regards the subsistence of our affections after death, made use of this platonic notion, with great beauty and strength of reason.

On surveying the most indifferent works of nature, men of the best sense have been touched, more or less, with these groundless horrors and presages of futurity.

Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

Not every one that puts on the appearance of goodness, is good.

And there appeared to them Elias with Moses.

Your fathers, where are they? and the prophets, do they live for ever?

At last, after much fatigue, through deep roads and bad weather, we came with no small difficulty to our journey's end.

The praise of judgment, Virgil has justly contested with Homer; but his invention remains yet unrivalled.

Instead of being critics on others, let us employ our criticism on ourselves.

Leaving others to be judged by Him who searcheth the heart, let us implore his assistance, for enabling us to act well our own part.

After passion has for a while exercised its tyrannical sway, its vehemence may by degrees subside.

This fallacious art, instead of lengthening life, debars us from enjoying it.

Indulging ourselves in imaginary, often deprives us of real enjoyments.

When reduced to poverty, how will that nobleman be able to conduct himself, who was educated only to magnificence and pleasure?

It is highly proper that a man should be acquainted with a variety of things, the utility of which is above a child's comprehension: but is it necessary, or even possible, that a child should learn every thing it behooves a man to know?

When they fall into sudden difficulties, they are less perplexed, and when they encounter dangers they are less alarmed, than others in the like circumstances.

For all your actions, and particularly for the employments of youth, you must hereafter give an account.

SECTION 4.

CHARITY breathes habitual kindness towards friends, courtesy towards strangers, long-suffering to enemies.

Gentleness ought to form our address, to regulate our speech, and to diffuse itself over our whole behaviour.

The propensity to look forward into life, is too often immoderately indulged, and grossly abused.

The regular tenor of a virtuous and pious life, will prove the best preparation for old age, for death, and for immortality.

These rules are intended to teach young persons to write with propriety, perspicuity, and elegance.

Sinful pleasures degrade human honour, and blast the opening prospects of human felicity.

In this state of mind, every object appears gloomy, and every employment of life becomes an oppressive burden.

They will acquire different views, by entering on a virtuous course of action, and applying to the honourable discharge of the functions of their station.

By the perpetual course of dissipation, in which sensualists are engaged; by the excesses which they indulge; by the riotous revel, and the midnight, or rather morning hours, to which they prolong their festivity; they debilitate their bodies, wear out their spirits, and cut themselves off from the comforts and duties of life.

SECTION 5.

By what I have already expressed, the reader will perceive the business upon which I am to proceed.

May the happy message be applied to us, in all its virtue, strength, and comfort!

Generosity is a showy virtue, of which many persons are very fond.

These arguments were, without hesitation, and with great eagerness, embraced.

It is proper to be long in deliberating; but we should execute speedily.

Form your measures with prudence; but divest yourselves of anxiety about the issue.

We are struck, we know not how, with the symmetry of any thing we see; and immediately acknowledge the beauty of an object, without inquiring into the cause of that beauty.

With Cicero's writings, these persons are more conversant, than with those of Demosthenes, who, by many degrees, as an orator at least, excelled the other.

SECTION 7.

OUR British gardeners, instead of following nature, love to deviate from it as much as possible. Or—instead of humouring, &c. love to thwart it, &c.

I have observed of late the style of some great ministers, very much to exceed that of any other writers.

The old may inform the young; and the young may animate the old.

The account is generally balanced; for what we lose on the one hand, we gain on the other.

The laughers will be for those who have most wit; the serious, for those who have most reason on their side.

If men of eminence are exposed to censure on the one hand, they are as much exposed to flattery on the other. If they receive reproaches which are not due, they likewise receive praises that are not due.

He can bribe, but he cannot seduce. He can buy, but he cannot gain. He can lie, but he cannot deceive.

He embraced the cause of liberty faintly, and pursued it irresolutely; he grew tired of it, when he had much to hope; and gave it up, when he had nothing to fear.

There may remain a suspicion that we overrate the greatness of his genius, in the same manner as we overrate the greatness of bodies, that are disproportioned and misshapen.

SECTION 7.

Sobriety of mind suits the present state of man.

As supporters of unlawful assemblies, these people were seized and punished.

To use the Divine name habitually, and without serious consideration, is highly irreverent.

From the kindness with which he was at first received, great hopes of success were entertained.

They conducted themselves craftily, and ensnared us before we had time to escape.

To our confined and humble station it belongs not to censure; but to submit, trust, and adore.

The solace of the mind, under all its labours, is hope; and there are few situations which exclude it entirely.

The humiliation of the mighty, and the fall of ambition from its towering height, little concern the bulk of mankind.

Tranquillity, order, and magnanimity, dwell with the pious and resigned man.

Idleness, ease, and prosperity, have a natural tendency to generate folly and vice.

By a cheerful, candid, and uniform temper, he conciliated general favour.

We reached the mansion before noon. It was a strong, magnificent, Gothic edifice.

I had a long and perilous journey, but a pleasing companion, who relieved the fatigue of it.

The speech was introduced by a sensible exordium, which made a favourable impression.

The commons made a warm remonstrance against so arbitrary a requisition.

The truly illustrious are they who do not court the praise of the world, but who perform the actions which deserve it.

By means of society, our wants are supplied, and our lives are rendered comfortable; our capacities are enlarged, and our virtuous affections called forth into their proper exercise.

Life cannot but prove vain to them who affect a disrelish of every pleasure, that is not both exquisite and new; who measure enjoyment, not by their own feelings, but by the standard of fashion; who think themselves miserable if others do not admire their state.

By the experience of distress, an arrogant insensibility of temper is most effectually corrected; as the remembrance of our own sufferings, naturally prompts us to feel for others when they suffer. But if Providence has been so kind as not to subject us to much of this discipline in our own lot, let us draw improvement from the harder lot of others. Let us sometimes step aside from the smooth and flowery paths, in which we are permitted to walk, in order to view the toilsome march of our fellows through the thorny desert.

As no one is without his failings, few also are void of amiable qualities.

Providence delivered them up to themselves, and they became their own tormentors.

From disappointments and trials, we learn the insufficiency of temporal things to happiness; and are taught to seek it in religion and virtue.

No human happiness is so pure as not to contain any alloy.

There is a time when factions, by their vehemence, confound and disable one another.

I intend to make use of these words in my following speculations. Or—in the course of my speculations.

Hope; the cheering star of life, darts a ray of light through the thickest gloom.

The scheme was highly expensive to him, and proved the gulf of his estate.

He was so much skilled in the exercise of the oar, that few could equal him.

The death of Cato has, if I may be allowed to say so, rendered the Senate an orphan.

Let us be careful to suit our sails to the wind and weather; and to steer our vessel aright, that we may avoid the rocks and shoals, which lie every where around us.

At length Erasmus, that great injur'd name,
(The glory of the priesthood and the shame,)
Stem'd the wild torrent of a barb'rous age,
And drove those holy Vandals off the stage.

In this our day of proof, our land of hope,
The good man has his clouds that intervene;
Clouds that may dim his sublunary day,
But cannot darken; even the best must own,
Patience and resignation are the pillars
Of human peace on earth.

On the wide sea of letters, 'twas thy boast
To crowd each sail, and touch at ev'ry coast:
From that rich deep how often hast thou brought
The pure and precious pearls of splendid thought!
How didst thou triumph on that subject tide,
Till vanity's wild gust, and stormy pride,
Drove thy strong bark, in evil hour, to split
Upon the fatal rock of impious wit!

Since the time that reason began to exert her powers, thought, during our waking hours, has been active in every breast, without a moment's suspension or pause. The current of ideas has been always flowing. The wheels of the spiritual engine have circulated with perpetual motion.

The man who has no rule over his own spirit, possesses no defence against dangers of any sort. He lies open to every insurrection of ill-humour, and every invasion of distress. Whereas he who is employed in regulating his mind, is making provision against all the accidents of life. He is erecting a fortress into which, in the day of danger, he can retreat with safety.

Tamerlane the Great, writes to Bajazet, emperor of the Ottomans, in the following terms.—“ Where is the monarch who dares resist us? Where is the potentate who does not glory in being numbered among our attendants? As for thee, ignobly descended, since thy unbounded ambition has subverted all thy vain expectations, it would be proper, that thou shouldst repress thy temerity, repent of thy perfidy, and become just and sincere in all thy transactions. This will secure to thee a safe and quiet retreat; and preserve thee from falling a victim to that vengeance, which thou hast so highly provoked, and so justly deserved.

It is pleasant to be virtuous and good; because that it is to excel many others: it is pleasant to grow better; because that it is to excel ourselves: it is pleasant even to mortify and subdue our lusts; because that is victory: it is pleasant to command our appetites and passions, and to keep them in due order, within the bounds of reason and religion; because this is empire.

SECTION I.

WHAT is human life to all, but a mixture of some scattered joys and pleasures, with various cares and troubles?

Favours of every kind are doubled, when they are speedily conferred.

He that is himself weary, will soon weary the company.

He that will have the kindness of others, must endure their follies.

The first years of man must make provision for the last.

Perpetual levity must end in ignorance.

In these, and in similar cases, we should, generally, in our alms, suffer no one to be witness, but Him who must see every thing.

The neglect of his studies and opportunities of improvement, is the ground of his being so badly qualified for the business. Or—is the reason that he is so badly, &c.

That Plutarch wrote the lives of Demosthenes and Cicero at Chæronea, is clear from his own account.

I wish to cultivate a further acquaintance with you.

He may make the attempt, but he cannot succeed.

No pains were spared by his tutor, to improve him in all useful knowledge.

In no scene of her life was Mary's address more remarkably displayed.

This was the original cause of so barbarous a practice.

By a variety of false insinuations, he craftily endeavoured to turn the emperor to his purpose.

The beauty displayed in the earth, equals the grandeur conspicuous in the heavens.

In the health and vigour of the body, and in the flourishing state of worldly fortune, all rejoice.

What passes in the hearts of men, is generally invisible to the public eye.

Many associations are formed by laws the most arbitrary.

These instances will, it is hoped be sufficient to satisfy every reasonable mind.

By rules so general and comprehensive as these are, the clearest ideas are conveyed.

He determined not to comply with the proposal, unless he should receive a fair compensation.

There can be no doubt that health is preferable to riches.

We believe, said they to their friends, that the perusal of such books has ruined our principles. Or—ruined your principles.

John's temper greatly indisposed him for giving instruction. Or—for receiving instruction.

Vegetation is constantly advancing, though no eye can trace its gradations.

His importunity was the reason of my consenting to the measure.

I conceived a great regard for him; and I could not but mourn for the loss of him. Or—for the loss he had sustained.

He was confined in his own house, by the officer who had apprehended him. Or—He was confined in the house of the officer, by whom he had been apprehended.

Charlotte, the friend of Amelia, to whom no one imputed blame, was too prompt in her friend's vindication. Or—in her own vindication.

Men who are rich and avaricious, drown themselves in a spring which might have watered all around them.

I should prefer his being of rather slow parts, than of a bad disposition.

As soon as Eugenius undertook the care of a parish, it engrossed his attention.

The plan will at once contribute to general convenience, and to the beauty and elegance of the town.

Together with the national debt, the greatest national advantages are transmitted to succeeding generations.

Their intimacy had probably commenced in the happier period of their youth and obscurity.

His subject is precisely of that kind, which only a daring imagination could have adopted.

This emperor conjured the Senate, that the purity of his reign might not be stained by the blood of even a guilty senator.

It is a happy constitution of mind, to be able to view successive objects so steadily, that the more important may never prevent us from doing justice to those which are of less consequence.

This activity drew over to Virginia, great numbers of enterprising men; who came either in search of fortune, or of liberty, which was the only compensation for the want of fortune.

The erroneous judgment of parents, respecting the conduct of schoolmasters, has paved the way to the ruin of hopeful boys, and disturbed the peace of many an ingenious man, who had engaged in the care of youth.

He accordingly draws out his forces, and offers battle to Hiero, who immediately accepts it.

James lay late in bed yesterday; and this morning he lies still later.

The reason of this strange proceeding, will be explained when I make my defence.

I have often observed him, and this is his mode of proceeding: he first enjoins silence; and then, &c.

Not having known or considered the subject, he made a crude decision.

All of them were deceived by his fair pretences, and all of them lost their property.

It is more than a year since I left school.

He was guilty of conduct so atrocious, that he was entirely deserted by his friends.

No other employment than that of a bookseller, suited his taste. Or—No employment but that of a bookseller, &c.

By this I am instructed, and by that I am honoured. I pleaded that I was sincere; and, after some time, he assented to the truth of it; by which I entirely escaped punishment.

To this I am the more disposed, as it will serve to illustrate the principles above advanced.

From what I have said, you will readily perceive the subject on which I am to proceed.

These are points too trivial to be noticed. They are objects with which I am totally unacquainted.

The nearer that men approach to each other, the more numerous are their points of contact, and the greater will be their pleasures or their pains.

Thus I have endeavoured to render the subject more intelligible.

This author is more remarkable for strength of sentiment, than for harmony of language.

Many persons are more delighted with correct and elegant language, than with important sentiments and accurate reasoning.

I feel myself grateful to my friend, for all the instances of kindness, which he has manifested to me. Or—for all his proofs of kindness.

It is not from this world that any ray of comfort can proceed, to cheer the gloom of the last hour.

SECTION 4.

Exercises, p. 179.

It is dangerous for mortal beauty, or terrestrial virtue, to be examined by too strong a light.

Beautiful women seldom possess any great accomplishment of mind, because they, for the most part, study behaviour rather than solid excellence.

To fret and repine at every disappointment of our wishes, is to discover the temper of froward children, not of men, far less of Christians.

It is decreed by Providence, that nothing truly valuable shall be obtained in our present state, but with difficulty and danger.

Labour necessarily requires pauses of ease and relaxation; and the deliciousness of ease commonly makes us unwilling to return to labour.

Nothing can be great which is not right; nothing which reason condemns, can be suitable to the dignity of the human mind.

In youth, we have warm hopes, which are soon blasted by rashness and negligence; and great designs, which are defeated by inexperience.

To the children of idleness, the haunts of dissipation open many a wide and inviting gate, by night and by day.

True virtue must form one complete and entire system. All its parts are connected; piety with morality, charity with justice, benevolence with temperance and fortitude.

Dissimulation degrades parts and learning; obscures the lustre of every accomplishment; and sinks us into universal contempt.

Positive as you now are in your opinions, and confident in your assertions, be assured that the time approaches, when both men and things will appear to you in a different light,

In this age of dissipation and luxury, how many avenues are constantly open that lead to the temple of folly?

By extravagance and idleness, and the vain ambition of emulating others in the splendid show of life, may run into expense beyond their fortune.

Objects are distinguished from each other by their qualities: they are separated by the distance of time or place.

Clarendon, being a man of extensive capacity, stored his mind with a variety of ideas; which circumstance contributed to the successful exertion of his vigorous abilities.

SECTION 5.

Exercises, p. 180.

The highest degree of reverence should be paid to youth; and nothing indecent should be suffered to approach their eyes or ears.

He who is blessed with a clear conscience, enjoys, in the worst conjunctures of human life, a peace, a dignity, an elevation of mind, peculiar to virtue.

In a few years, the hand of industry may change the face of a country; but it often requires as many generations, to change the sentiments and manners of a people.

When the human mind dwells long and attentively on any subject, the passions are apt to grow warm, interested and enthusiastic: and often force into their service the understanding which they ought to obey.

Some years afterwards, being released from prison he was by reason of his consummate knowledge of law and military affairs, exalted to the supreme power.

The discontented man is never found without a great share of malignity. His spleen irritates and sours his temper, and leads him to discharge its venom on all with whom he stands connected.

We cannot doubt that all the proceedings of Providence, when fully understood, will appear as equitable, as now they seem irregular.

All that great wealth generally gives above a moderate fortune, is, more room for the freaks of caprice, and more privilege for ignorance and vice; a quicker succession of flatteries, and a larger circle of voluptuousness.

The miscarriages of the great designs of princes, are recorded in the histories of the world, but are of small use to the bulk of mankind, who seem very little interested in admonitions against errors which they cannot commit.

Were there any man who could say, that he had never, in the course of his life, suffered himself to be transported by passion; or given just ground of offence to any one, such a man might have some plea for impatience, when he received from others unreasonable treatment.

Christianity will, at some future period, influence the conduct of nations as well as of individuals. But this event, though its greatest, will probably be its latest triumph; for it can be effected only through the medium of private character: and it will, therefore, be a change not rapid in its progress, and visible at every step; but gradual in its advances, and perceptible only when considerable effects have been produced.

The British constitution stands among the nations of the earth, like an ancient oak in the wood, which, after having overcome many a blast, overtops the other trees of the forest, and commands respect and veneration.

SECTION 6.

See Exercises, p. 182.

WHAT an anchor is to a ship in a dark night, on an unknown coast, and amidst a boisterous ocean, that is the hope of future happiness to the soul, when distracted by the confusions of the world. In danger, it gives security; amidst general fluctuation, it affords one fixed point of rest.

Our pride and self-conceit render us quarrelsome and contentious, by nourishing a weak and childish sensibility to every fancied point of our own honour or interest, while they shut up all regard to the honour or interest of our brethren.

If there be any first principle of wisdom, it is undoubtedly this: the distresses that are removable, endeavour to remove; those which cannot be removed, bear with as little disquiet as you can: in every situation of life, there are comforts; find them out, and enjoy them.

Instead of aspiring beyond your proper level, bring down your mind to your state; lest, by aiming too high, you spend your life in a train of fruitless pursuits, and bring yourself at last to a state of entire insignificance and contempt.

Often have we seen, that what we considered at the time, as a sore disappointment, has proved in the issue, to be a merciful providence; and that, if what we once eagerly wished for had been obtained, it would have been so far from making us happy, that it would have produced our ruin.

Can the stream continue to flow when it is cut off from the fountain? Can the branch flourish when torn away from the stock which gave it nourishment? No more can dependent spirits be happy, when deprived of all union with the Father of spirits, and the Fountain of happiness.

Prosperity is redoubled to a good man, by his generous use of it. It is reflected back upon him from every one whom he makes happy. In the intercourse of domestic affection, in the attachment of friends, the gratitude of dependents, the esteem and good will of all who know him, he sees blessings multiplied round him on every side.

He that would pass the latter part of life with honour and decency, must, when he is young, consider, that he shall one day be old; and remember when he is old, that he once was young. In youth, he must lay up knowledge for his support, when his powers of acting shall forsake him; and in age, forbear to animadvert with rigour, on faults which experience only can correct.

Let us consider that youth is not of long duration; and that in maturer age, when the enchantments of fancy shall cease, and phantoms dance no more about us, we shall have no comforts but the approbation of our own hearts, the esteem of wise men, and the means of doing good. Let us live as men who are some time to grow old; and to whom it will be the most dreadful of all evils, to count their past years only by follies, and to be reminded of their former luxuriance of health, only by the maladies which riot has produced.

PREFACE.

AS the grammar contains a considerable number of positions and minor rules, which are not readily discoverable by the general arrangement of the work; and as the last editions of the Exercises and Key, comprise many critical and explanatory notes, which could not conveniently be inserted in the Grammar; the author conceived that an Alphabetical Index to the Grammar, Exercises, and Key, would not be unacceptable to the reader. With this view, and in conformity with the wishes of persons, for whose judgment he entertains great respect, he has produced the following Index to the three books.

In forming this work, it was not his sole design to assist the student, in readily discovering any particular subjects of grammar. He wished also to express the most important principles of the art, in short, comprehensive, and striking sentences, calculated to stimulate the learner's curiosity, and to impress the subjects more deeply in his memory. The author was desirous that the work should at once form an Index to particulars, and an Epitome of the chief rules and principles of the language.

The reader who consults this Index, will observe that the references to the pages always point to the Grammar, unless the Exercises, or the Key, are mentioned. The Stereotype edition of the Grammar, the Twelfth of the Exercises, and the Tenth of the Key, are the editions referred to: and the pages of reference to each of the books, will be the same, in every subsequent edition.

In all cases, where explanatory notes, or critical discussions, have been inserted in the Exercises or the Key, the Index refers to the pages which contain them: and, in a few special cases, these books are referred to, as illustrating and exemplifying the rules. But general references of this kind could not be made, without giving the Index too great an extent. The student may, however, in every rule that is mentioned, readily apply to the correspondent Exercise and Key; in which he will always find a variety of exemplification, and, in many instances, extended views of the subject.

THE END.

The following are a few of the numerous recommendations of MURRAY'S GRAMMAR, which have appeared in the works of different Authors.

"Mr. Murray's Grammar, and Selection of lessons for reading, are the best in the English language."

Walker's Elements of Elocution. Second edition.

"Since the first edition of our work, we have seen with pleasure an English Grammar—English Exercises—and a Key to the English Exercises, by Mr. Lindley Murray."

Edgeworth's Practical Education. Second edition.

"Murray's English Grammar. This is the most complete grammar of our language. My opinion is confirmed by that of the public, as this work now appears in the fourteenth edition."

Kett's Elements of General Knowledge. Sixth edition.

"Murray's Grammar, together with his English Exercises and Key, have nearly superseded every thing else of the kind, by concentrating the remarks of the best authors on the subject. They are pieces of inestimable utility."

Evan's Essay on the Education of Youth.

"The best English Grammar now extant, is that written by Mr. Lindley Murray; who by this publication, and by several others connected with it, and designed as auxiliaries to its principal purpose, has become entitled to the gratitude of every friend to English literature, and to true virtue."

Dr. Miller's Retrospect of the Eighteenth Century.

"By Grammar you have been taught the nature, power, and construction of the English language; and that, not in a superficial manner, but by the most comprehensive system now extant, the larger Grammar of Mr. Lindley Murray; in which the delicacies, refinements, and peculiarities of our language, are inculcated and exemplified. The unwearied exertions of this gentleman have done more towards elucidating the obscurities, and embellishing the structure, of our language, than any other writer on the subject. Such a work has long been wanted; and, from the success with which it is executed, cannot be too highly appreciated."

Dr. Abercrombie's Charges to the Senior Class of the Philadelphia Academy—published 1804 and 1806.

"I need not acquaint the public, with the merit and success of Lindley Murray's Grammar; which seems to have superseded every other. Indeed, when we consider the plain simple mode of instruction he has adopted; the extent of observation he has displayed; and the copious variety of illustration he has added; we shall not wonder, that this Grammar has been so universally applauded."
